Abdullah conversing with the genie, as illustrated by Alice Marie-Harel

Abdullah is a young carpet merchant from the Sultanates of Rashpuht. He later lives in Ingary. He is also a friend of Jamal.

Biography[]

Castle in the Air[]

Before the beginning of the book, Abdullah's father dies. Abdullah does not know the reason why his father was disappointed in him and dreams about being a long-lost prince from another country. He later buys a carpet from a man and discovers that it takes him to places that replicate his dreams. He meets Flower-in-the-Night, daughter of the Sultan of Zanzib. He pays a visit to his friend Jamal, and discovers that he would not follow in his father's trade. He later plans to run away with Flower-in-the-Night after showing her pictures of men. But when he arrives at the palace, she is kidnapped by a djinn. Abdullah is arrested because they think he kidnapped Flower-in-the-Night. The Sultan threatens to kill Abdullah if his daughter isn't found. Abdullah uses his magic carpet and starts his journey. When he walks across the desert, he meets thieves who have a bottle containing a genie. Abdullah soon arrives in Ingary. He meets a soldier who claims to be from Strangia. Abdullah and the soldier are framed for assault and robbery. Abdullah finds out that the djinn is being forced to kidnap princesses around the world by his brother Dalzel. Abdullah and his group arrive at Kingsbury looking for a wizard. The djinn, who is called Hasruel, steals Princess Valeria. Abdullah eventually stops the djinn and Hasruel banishes his brother. It is also revealed that Flower-in-the-Night had the same dreams as Abdullah, only the other way around. Abdullah is promoted, along with Flower-in-the-Night, by the King of Ingary to Ambassador and is given a house in the Folding Valley.

She was an apprentice of Mrs. Pentstemmon, and is very fond of honey. She is good friends with Fanny Hatter, and takes on Martha Hatter as a pupil to teach her magic after Mr Hatter's death. Some weeks later she discovers that Martha and her sister Lettie switched places using one of Mrs Fairfax's own honey-based spells. She lets Lettie stay on as a student on the condition that she stay as her real self. Mrs Fairfax soon discovers that Lettie has a real gift for magic; and considers her to be in the same league as the Witch of the Waste, but in a good way. When Wizard Howl comes courting Lettie under the name 'Sylvester Oak', Mrs Fairfax recognizes him immediately, but doesn't let on that she does. She encourages Lettie to let Howl court her, because she sees that Lettie could learn a lot more from Howl than she could from Mrs Fairfax. When a dog comes to the house to stay, Mrs Fairfax sees that it is really a bespelled human. Later, Mrs Fairfax visits Sophie in the moving castle with Lettie, and after the curses on Howl and Wizard Suliman and Prince Justin are broken tells Prince Justin that Sophie is the lady of the house, or will be soon.

Biography[]

Early Life[]

Ben Sullivan was born in Wales. Some time before Howl, he discovered the land of Ingary and settled there permanently. He tutored under Mrs Pentstemmon, and was one of her best and last pupils (the last being Howl). He changed his name to Wizard Suliman. The King made him a Royal Wizard of Ingary. Suliman became good friends with Prince Justin, the King's brother. When the Witch of the Waste threatened Princess Valeria, the King ordered Suliman to go into the Waste and kill the Witch. Suliman went, but when he got there he started growing flowers and trees near the edge of the Waste, hoping to destroy the Witch that way. The Witch captured him and chopped him into pieces without killing him. When he was overpowered, he cast a strong spell ordering a scarecrow to come to his aid. But by the time the scarecrow was able to do that, Suliman was already in pieces and the scarecrow had trouble finding all of them.

Castle Series

Title: Castle Series

URL: https://howlscastle.fandom.com/wiki/Castle_Series

The Castle Series is the name of the series of books that follow the lives of Howl Jenkins Pendragon, Sophie Hatter, their Fire Demon Calcifer, and their Moving Castle. All of the books are written by Dianne Wynn Jones.

Howl's Moving Castle[]

Howl's Moving Castle is the first novel to be written in the series. Published in 1986, it follows the story of a young woman who leaves her life of near servitude in her mother's hat shop after she has been cursed to look like an old woman, and ends up living with a very powerful and mysterious sorcerer.

Howl's Moving Castle won a Boston Globe-Horn Book Award in 1987, and became an ALA Notable Book for both Children and Young Adults. In 2004, it was loosely adapted into an animated movie by Japanese director Hayao Miyazaki, which was nominated for an Academy Award for Best Animated Feature.

Castle in the Air[]

Castle in the Air is the first sequel to Howl's Moving Castle, and second book in the Castle Series. Published in 1990, it is often debated whether or not it counts as an actual sequel to Howl's Moving Castle. Though set mainly in the land of Ingary and deals with several prominent characters of the first book, those characters are only revealed late in the novel, and play a much more minor role than the novel's primary protagonists. Nevertheless, the book is officially labeled as the "Sequel to Howl's Moving Castle."

House of Many Ways[]

House of Many Ways is the most recent of the Castle Series to be written and published, and is the second sequel to Howl's Moving Castle. Though, like the last book, still told through the eyes of an outside character, this story deals more directly with the characters of the first novel, so is often considered to be its true sequel. Published in 2008, it was long awaited by fans of the series - a number which had greatly grown after the release of Miyazaki's movie.

Locales[]

Market Chipping[]

The story begins in Market Chipping, Sophie's home town. It is vibrant and lively and the location of the flower shop (formerly the hat shop belonging to the Hatter family) after Howl moves Calcifer. Cesari's (the pastry shop owned by Mrs. Cesari) is also located here. Other locations include Market Square.

Upper Folding[]

North of Market Chipping (about 21 miles), Upper Folding is located on the opposite side of the heather hills where Howl's Castle primarily wanders. It is home to Mrs. Annabel Fairfax, a witch who uses honey in many of her spells.

Bordering the Waste[]

The land bordering the Waste, as with the edge of Market Chipping, mainly consists of farms and pastures.

Story[]

Howl's Moving Castle (Book)[]

The Folding Valley is the very first setting introduced in the books. After Mr. Hatter dies, Lettie and Martha are sent away, with Lettie working at Cesari's and Martha to be apprenticed to Mrs. Annabel Fairfax. On May Day, Sophie runs into a young man (later revealed to be Howl) on Market Square and hurries to Cesari's to find that Lettie and Martha have switched places due to Lettie's desire to learn magic and Martha's desire to get married and have ten children. After the Witch of the Waste turns Sophie into an old woman, she leaves the hat shop and goes to Howl's Castle. Later in the book, the hat shop is turned into a flower shop after Howl moves Calcifer following the duel between himself and the Witch of the Waste.

Howl's Moving Castle (Movie)[link]

The Folding Valley is very different in the film. The mountains and hills are called the Waste, while the Waste was a wasteland in the book.

Count of Catterack

Title: Count of Catterack

URL: https://howlscastle.fandom.com/wiki/Count_of_Catterack

The Count of Catterack is a nobleman who is a high-ranking member of the King of Ingary's court.

Biography[]

The Count at some point eloped with a girl known as Jane Farrier, which later proved to be a point of gossip for the women of Folding Valley. Because of this, Sophie Hatter took advantage of a customer by claiming that one of her hat shop's products was the hat Farrier wore when she eloped with the count.

During Sophie's stay at the castle, following her transformation into an elderly crone, the Count was challenged to a duel by some opponent due to some unspecified offence, and so came to Sophie for assistance in the wizard's absence. Sophie was extremely reluctant to lend him aid, due to her misgivings concerning duels to the death, but nevertheless gifted him with a spell, informing him that once he threw it into the air, either he or his opponent would possess the chance of victory, but that victory would be entirely dependent upon him.

Following Sophie's visit to the King in an attempt to blacken Howl's name, she later encountered the Count, who thanked her for her assistance and informed her that he had won the duel.

Biography[]

Early life[]

Sometime prior to the start of the novel, Dalzel's mother Dazrah was ravished by an evil djinn. Following Dalzel's birth, he came out of his mother's womb hideously deformed solely on account of the fact that the respective natures of both his father and mother - the former being evil, and the latter being good - were incompatible, and, out of disgust, his mother gave him to Hasruel to look after.[1] Therefore, Hasruel pampered and spoiled Dalzel as he grew up, until, according to his account, when the younger djinn came of age, his more sinister nature became more apparent, to the extent that he enslaved Hasruel by stealing his life and forcing him to work for him, which was partly Hasruel's fault on account of the fact that he had naively shown Dalzel the location of his life, not thinking that he would use it.

Kidnapping princesses[]

Thus, following his brother's enslavement, Dalzel turned his attention to abducting as many princesses as he could, since he believed that it was his right to get married,[2] and because only women of extremely high rank were those he believed to be worthy of him. Therefore, he ordered Hasruel to steal Howl's Castle so that it could be used as a base, since he knew that, in contrast to djinn, the human princesses he would abduct would not be able to levitate.[3] Following this, Dalzel amassed a harem of around thirty princesses from different countries around the world.[4]

However, making sure to keep the princesses in check would be another matter entirely, since, ironically for such a spoiled djinn, Dalzel found four-year-old Princess Valeria's temper tantrums difficult to deal with and demanded that Hasruel put a sleeping spell on her.[5] Sophie and Abdullah later infiltrated the castle, and encountered the princesses, reuniting Abdullah with Flower-in-the-Night, who had also been abducted. Therefore, they hatched a plan to rescue Hasruel's life and free him from Dalzel's enslavement. Using Valeria as a distraction, they were able to liberate the elder djinn, and, once he asked them what he could do repay them, much to Dalzel's utter chagrin, Abdullah ordered him to send the younger djinn into exile. However, there was a caveat: the two nieces, who were attracted to the djinn in any case, were to accompany Dalzel into exile, much to the younger djinn's delight.

Physical appearance[]

Dalzel is described by Jones thusly:

[...]Abdullah saw with surprise that Dalzel was beautiful. Apart from his fungoid ears and taloned feet, he could have been a tall, angelic man. Golden curls grew on his head and his wings, although small and stunted-looking, were golden too. His very red mouth spread into a sweet smile. Altogether, he had an unearthly beauty that matched the strange cloud kingdom where he lived.[6]

Personality[]

Dalzel is highly spoiled and prone to temper tantrums. He appears to bear a sense of entitlement in his personality, since, not only does he force his brother to capture princesses on his behalf, he feels that only princesses, or otherwise human women of incredibly high rank, are worthy of him, on account of his status as a djinn, which Hasruel believes to have been inherited from Dazrah.[7] Given that he has four-year-old Princess Valeria and the child princess of Tsapfan among his harem, he appears not to care whether or not any potential brides are underage.[8] However, he appears to be flexible, as evidenced when he decides that he prefers the fat nieces who were to marry Abdullah over any princess, and curses himself for not endeavouring to abduct obese women instead.[9]

Biography

Diana was born in London, the daughter of Marjorie (née Jackson) and Richard Aneurin Jones, both of whom were teachers. When war was announced, shortly after her fifth birthday, she was evacuated to Wales, and thereafter moved several times, including periods in the Lake District, in York, and back in London. In 1943 her family finally settled in Thaxted, Essex, where her parents worked running an educational conference centre. There, Jones and her two younger sisters Isobel (later Professor Isobel Armstrong, the literary critic) and Ursula (later an actress and a children's writer) spent a childhood left chiefly to their own devices. After attending the Friends School Saffron Walden, she studied English at St Anne's College in Oxford, where she attended lectures by both C. S. Lewis and J. R. R. Tolkien before graduating in 1956. In the same year she married John Burrow, a scholar of medieval literature, with whom she had three sons, Richard, Michael and Colin. After a brief period in London, in 1957 the couple returned to Oxford, where they stayed until moving to Bristol in 1976.

According to her autobiography, Jones decided she was an atheist when she was a child.[1]

Dimensional magic is a type of magic which is centered around bending space. The most notable example of this is William Norland's house. Through the use of advance dimensional magic by an unknown wizard, a door in the Wizard Norland's house was enchanted to lead to a numerous variety of locations.

Another, smaller, example of dimensional magic is Howl's door that was a portal to four different locations, each location corresponding to a particular color on the knob.

Djinn

Title: Djinn

Djinn are magical beings that reside primarily in the Sultanates of Rashpuht. Although djinn possess great power, they are still mortal and can be killed if their "life" is stolen from them and destroyed. Falling Star

Title: Falling Star

URL: https://howlscastle.fandom.com/wiki/Falling_Star

A Fire Demon is a type of fantastic creature from the land of Ingary. They are extremely powerful creatures in magic, but are extremely weak physically. They originate as Star Children, or Falling Stars, who fall to earth from the heavens. Ordinarily, they are so weak that they reach the ground and have only a few moments before they wither and die. However, a human may catch one with the help of seven-league boots, and by entering a contract with the demon, may exchange their heart for some of their power. The contract grants the Fire Demon an extended life, as long as that of their partner's. However, it also binds the two together, and whatever one feels, the other feels as well.

Demons also seem to bring out the worst traits of their partner. Howl becomes much more self-centered and vain after his contract with Calcifer, and quits his schooling going into hiding. It is unknown if the Witch of the Waste changed after receiving her demon, or if she was always as cruel. Fanny Hatter

Title: Fanny Hatter

URL: https://howlscastle.fandom.com/wiki/Fanny_Hatter

Fanny Hatter is Mr. Hatter's second wife who worked in his hat shop.

She is only Martha's biological mother, though cares for all three children equally. After Mr. Hatter's death, she runs the hat shop for some time, with Sophie as an apprentice. Martha claims that Fanny is exploiting Sophie's talent for making hats, leaving Sophie to work in the shop while she goes off to have fun and spend the money Sophie makes. This is, however, later shown to be untrue, though she was rather careless of Sophie's well being, which led Sophie to feel like she was old before her time from constant, dull work. After Sophie leaves the shop, Fanny meets a rich man and marries him, and as a consequence sells the shop, unknowingly, to Howl. Howl later arranges for her and Sophie's sisters to come visit Sophie seemingly "by coincidence" to distract Sophie from "messing up" his plans to defeat the Witch of the Waste.

She is replaced in the movie by Honey Hatter, and is omitted from the BBC radio drama, along with Sophie's prior connection to the hat shop.

A Fire Demon is a type of fantastic creature from the land of Ingary. They are extremely powerful creatures in magic, but are extremely weak physically. They originate as Star Children, or Falling Stars, who fall to earth from the heavens. Ordinarily, they are so weak that they reach the ground and have only a few moments before they wither and die. However, a human may catch one with the help of seven-league boots, and by entering a contract with the demon, may exchange their heart for some of their power. The contract grants the Fire Demon an extended life, as long as that of their partner's. However, it also binds the two together, and whatever one feels, the other feels as well.

Demons also seem to bring out the worst traits of their partner. Howl becomes much more self-centered and vain after his contract with Calcifer, and quits his schooling going into hiding. Flower-in-the-Night

Title: Flower-in-the-Night

URL: <https://howlscastle.fandom.com/wiki/Flower-in-the-Night>

Flower-in-the-Night is a young princess of the Sultanates of Rashpuht who appears in the novel Castle in the Air. She is the daughter of the Sultan of Zanzib and eventually the wife of Abdullah and Ambassador to Ingary.

Appearance[]

Flower-in-the-Night is said to be a very beautiful young lady, with large, dark eyes and long dark hair.

Story[]

She is only allowed out of the palace at night, and even then only into the garden, as a prophecy made at her birth decreed that she would marry the first man she would see aside from her father. The Sultan wishes her to marry for political reasons to a prince from a neighbouring country.

She is first met when Abdullah falls asleep atop his magic carpet and is flown to her garden in his sleep. She mistakes him for a woman, assuming that all men look like her father (fat, bald and bearded). Abdullah is shocked by this, and promises to bring her as many portraits of men as he can, although he is uncertain whether he is in a dream or not. However he returns the next night with more than one hundred portraits, and Flower-in-the-Night says that he is better looking than them all. They declare that they love each other and decide they must fly away, to avoid angering her father. However whilst trying to determine how exactly the carpet works, Abdullah accidentally orders it back to his stall, and he is whisked away.

On the third night he returns, but whilst there a djinn, Hasruel, appears and kidnaps Flower-in-the-Night, flying off with her. Abdullah sets out to rescue her, thus providing the plot of the story.

She is not seen again until Abdullah reaches her place of captivity - a castle high above the clouds, which is actually Howl's castle, modified by Hasruel into a djinn palace. She and many other princesses are being held there by Dalzel, Hasruel's brother, another djinn, as his 'wives', although they are reject him, Flower-in-the-Night especially. As she is extremely intelligent, she irritates him by asking frequent questions which he cannot answer, and forces him to grant her requests in exchange for leaving him in peace, all the while planning to escape.

After Abdullah arrives to rescue her, she is initially distant toward him, causing him some distress, but when he asks her why she is acting so she tells him that Princess Beatrice of Strangia, another captive, has said that from his actions he does not love her. Abdullah convinces her this is not true, and they kiss.

Once they escape the castle, partly thanks to Flower-in-the-Night's intelligence, and all is put to rights, Flower-in-the-Night marries Abdullah and they are given the position of Ambassadors, and a house with a bluebell meadow garden in Folding Valley.

Locales[]

Market Chipping[]

The story begins in Market Chipping, Sophie's home town. It is vibrant and lively and the location of the flower shop (formerly the hat shop belonging to the Hatter family) after Howl moves Calcifer. Cesari's (the pastry shop owned by Mrs. Cesari) is also located here. Other locations include Market Square.

Upper Folding[]

North of Market Chipping (about 21 miles), Upper Folding is located on the opposite side of the heather hills where Howl's Castle primarily wanders. It is home to Mrs. Annabel Fairfax, a witch who uses honey in many of her spells.

Bordering the Waste[]

The land bordering the Waste, as with the edge of Market Chipping, mainly consists of farms and pastures.

Story[]

Howl's Moving Castle (Book)[]

The Folding Valley is the very first setting introduced in the books. After Mr. Hatter dies, Lettie and Martha are sent away, with Lettie working at Cesari's and Martha to be apprenticed to Mrs. Annabel Fairfax. On May Day, Sophie runs into a young man (later revealed to be Howl) on Market Square and hurries to Cesari's to find that Lettie and Martha have switched places due to Lettie's desire to learn magic and Martha's desire to get married and have ten children. After the Witch of the Waste turns Sophie into an old woman, she leaves the hat shop and goes to Howl's Castle. Later in the book, the hat shop is turned into a flower shop after Howl moves Calcifer following the duel between himself and the Witch of the Waste.

Howl's Moving Castle (Movie)[link]

The Folding Valley is very different in the film. The mountains and hills are called the Waste, while the Waste was a wasteland in the book.

Character Info

Gender

Hin (pronounced Hee-n) is a small and very ancient white and brown dog who appears only in the movie. He works for Madame Suliman as an errand runner and an inconspicuous, though unreliable, spy. He appears to replace Percival from the books. The small white dog Waif seems to be a nod to the character from the movie.

Howl's Moving Castle (Movie)[]

"I can't believe you work for Suliman...I guess it's too late to toss him."

—Sophie

Heen, Madame Suliman's personal errand-dog, is sent out from the palace to escort Sophie Hatter, who is posing as Howl's mother. However, Sophie thinks that Heen is Howl Jenkins Pendragon in disguise, so begins a one-sided conversation with him, and even drags him up the endless stairs to the palace with her. Heen leads her away from the Witch of the Waste through a secret entrance to Madame Suliman herself.

Madame Suliman reveals the dog's true nature during their discussion, which certainly surprises Sophie but she doesn't voice this. She then explains that she has drained the Witch of the Waste's magical powers, restoring her to her original appearance, a harmless old lady. This is when Howl comes into the palace, disguised as the King.

When they make their escape from the palace, Heen jumps onto their Flying Kayak just as they take off, and comes to the castle with them. He lives there for some time, doing nothing more, it seems, than act as a family dog.

When the castle collapses after Calcifer is nearly extinguished, Heen jumps after Sophie, and points out to her that her ring is glowing when she is too grief-stricken to notice. He leads her into Howl's past through the door, and leads her back out when their journey into the past is over.

At the end of the movie, Madame Suliman is shown looking into the orb in her staff to see him, asking him why he did not report in earlier, implying that she sent him to go with Sophie to act as a spy in Howl's Castle. He reveals the scene behind him of a happy ending, for which Suliman calls him a "little traitor," though does not seem terribly upset.

Henchmen

Title: Henchmen

URL: <https://howlscastle.fandom.com/wiki/Henchmen>

Witch of The Waste's henchmen

The henchmen seen at the beginning of the movie of Howl's Moving Castle, and are controlled by the Witch of the Waste to do her bidding. They carry her around in a palanquin which may be a reason why she finds it difficult to climb the numerous palace steps.

Madame Suliman has similar looking henchmen to the Witch of the Waste, as she sends them to capture Howl and Sophie. They are seen trying to break into the hat shop, which they are at from a portal in the castle. Near the end of the movie, the henchmen's attacks persist but they are unable to break in as they are prevented by Calcifer's protection on the castle.

The henchmen are not referred to by name by any of the characters.

Abilities[]

They have fluid movement enabling them to squeeze through small spaces and walls. They are seen chasing after Howl at the beginning of the movie.

Howl: Don't be alarmed but I'm being followed, act normal. -To Sophie, after rescuing her from the soldiers.

Madam Suliman's henchmen possess similar powers, being able to move flexiably to fit anything such as doorways and clothes. Along with this, the henchmen are fast and can jump far but they aren't able to fly, except for some of them, who have wings on their shoulders.

More henchmen coming after Howl

Appearance[]

The Witch of the Waste's palanquin carrying henchmen, are dressed in suits with ballroom masks to cover their faces, enabling them to blend in with the crowd. They have very long arms and walk with a bent back and arms hanging, almost like an ape. The henchmen are motionless until the command of the Witch of the Waste, which is when they spring upright and carry her wherever she needs to go.

The henchmen make appearances throughout the movie, at the hat shop when the Witch of the Waste curses Sophie, in the marketplace when she is looking for Howl's castle, and in the scene before the Witch visits the palace- summoned by the King. They are easily recognised by their sludge-like skin and large noses.

Madam Suliman's henchmen have different faces and bodies to the Witch of the Waste's, supporting a more bulkier torso and the flying henchmen having sharp teeth with snout-like noses. The flying henchmen have insect-like wings enabling them to fly very fast through the air, and to hover with no difficulty.

Description

Charmain Baker is in over her head. Looking after Great-Uncle William's tiny cottage while he's ill should have been easy. But Great-Uncle William is better known as the Royal Wizard Norland, and his house bends space and time. Its single door leads to any number of places—the bedrooms, the kitchen, the caves under the mountains, the past, and the Royal Mansion, to name just a few.

By opening that door, Charmain has become responsible for not only the house, but for an extremely magical stray dog, a muddled young apprentice wizard, and a box of the king's most treasured documents. She has encountered a terrifying beast called a lubbock, irritated a clan of small blue creatures, and wound up smack in the middle of an urgent search. The king and his daughter are desperate to find the lost, fabled Elfgift—so desperate that they've even called in an intimidating sorceress named Sophie to help. And where Sophie is, can the Wizard Howl and fire demon Calcifer be far behind?

Of course, with that magical family involved, there's bound to be chaos—and unexpected revelations.

Plot Summary

At the beginning

The story revolves around Charmain Baker, who is asked to look after her Great-Uncle William's house. Aunt Sempronia discusses the plans with her parents in High Norland City, the city around the Royal Mansion. The only problem is that Charmain always has her nose in a book and does not know anything about magic and has been raised thinking it to be vulgar by her mother. The next morning, Aunt Sempronia takes Charmain to the house.

History[]

Early Life (Novel)[]

Howl as a child

In the novel, Howl was born as Howell Jenkins to an ordinary family in modern-day Wales. However, he himself was anything but ordinary. Gifted with a natural talent for magic, he began studying it. Even in college, he wrote his thesis on magical spells and charms, and joined a group of other gifted magicians on Earth.

In Wales, Howl had a habit of going out with girls and then jilting them. In an attempt to hide from three angry rugby players whose sister he had jilted, he cast a spell that opened a portal to another land, Ingary, where he moved almost permanently. Still young, he took up tutelage under Mrs. Pentstemmon (or Madame Suliman in the movie). He became her last pupil, and one of her favorites (and best). His natural gift for magic showed, and he was quite powerful. He was in the same league as the Witch of the Waste. Howl is a wizard in the land of Ingary and he has several names; he is known as Wizard Howl in Market Chipping, "Wizard Pendragon" in the capital Kingsbury, and "Jenkins the Sorcerer" in lower-class Porthaven.

One night on the Porthaven Marshes, Howl caught a Falling Star named Calcifer and made a contract with him. He gave his heart to the creature, binding them together, and allowing Calcifer to live for he felt sorry for him, while boosting his own magical power. After doing so, Howl quit his apprenticeship and became a hermit. He dyed his hair and spent all his money on make-up and clothing, and spent his days wooing young ladies until they fell in love with him, and then jilted them. During this time, Howl found Michael Fisher sleeping on his doorstep, and invited him in. Howl was impressed by Calcifer's reaction to Michael. Though he never explicitly told Michael he could stay, Howl allowed him to live in the castle, eventually making him his apprentice. Also during this time, Howl courted and then dumped the Witch of the Waste, who put a curse on him.

Howl occasionally did work for the King's army, but avoided contact with them as much as possible.

Early Life (Movie)[[\]](#)

In the film he is implied to be a native of Ingary, as multiple elements contradict his backstory in the novel:

He is shown as a child when he first encountered Calcifer and made the contract with him (Howl was already an adult when he arrived in Ingary in the novel).

Howl mentions that his cottage in the Garden used to belong to his uncle.

The black quarter of the dial on the revolving door has a different destination.

Other differences include his apprenticeship to Madame Suliman instead of Mrs. Pentstemmon, with Madame Suliman being the film version's Royal Wizard of Ingary.

The film is also more ambiguous regarding his Howl's romantic pursuits, as he had dated the Witch of the Waste, the people in town do gossip about Howl's tendency to chase after women, and he had at least one other romantic relationship (as Markl mention Howl summoning spirits of darkness when a girl broke up with him).

Howl's Moving Castle[[\]](#)

Howl's Moving Castle (Novel)[[\]](#)

It is during one of his outings to find a young woman that he first meets Sophie. Howl first meets Sophie on May Day in Market Chipping before the Witch of The Waste casts an aging spell on her. Days later he returns to the Castle and is surprised to find an old woman cooking bacon on Calcifer. Despite Michael and Calcifer's complaints, he allows Sophie to clean the castle, though he stops her from cleaning his room. Although he has been gathering clues about Suliman's disappearance, Howl is concerned the King wants him to find Prince Justin. He gets Sophie to pretend to be his mother and say bad things about him to the king, but the king is more impressed than annoyed, and hires him as Royal Wizard anyway. The very same day, Mrs Pentstemmon is killed by the Witch of the Waste. Howl is grieved and vows to attend Mrs Pentstemmon's funeral no matter what.

Howl battles with the Witch of the Waste after attending Mrs Penstemmon's funeral. Now that the Witch knows he lives in Porthaven, he decides to move the castle to escape. Taking Michael and Sophie's wishes into consideration, he takes the hat shop in Market Chipping so Michael stays close to Martha (his love interest), and orders Calcifer to find a nice house with lots of flowers for Sophie. Howl helps in the shop and discovers that a dog that stowed away with them is secretly a bespelled human. When Sophie admits that she knew about it he is furious with her. He restores the bespelled human to his human form and suspects he is made of Wizard Suliman and Prince Justin's body parts. Howl is stunned and terrified at this realization; he was counting on Wizard Suliman being alive.

On the night before Midsummer's Day, Howl goes to Wales for a Rugby League Reunion and gets himself drunk out of fear. He uses Sophie to get information out of him, which Sophie is later furious about. On Midsummer's Day, Howl arranges for Sophie's family to visit, to keep Sophie out of trouble. When Sophie falls into the Witch's trap, he goes into the Waste to rescue her. There, he finds the Witch and the scarecrow battling, and Howl kills the Witch. After hearing that the Witch's fire-demon has entered the Castle and touched his guitar, Howl raises a wind to bring himself and Sophie back to the Castle quickly to apprehend the demon. On the way, he finally explains his motives to Sophie.

His honesty seals his fate and in the Castle the Witch's fire demon, in the shape of Howl's nephew's English teacher, gets hold of Calcifer and squeezes the heart Howl had given Calcifer to keep him alive. Howl collapses but Sophie saves him by giving him his heart back. After breaking Howl's and Calcifer's contract, Calcifer breaks the spell on Sophie and Sophie returns to her true age. Howl destroys the Witch's fire demon, which restores Suliman and Prince Justin to their true forms, and asks Sophie to marry him.

Howl's Moving Castle (Movie)[]

The movie adaptation by Hayao Miyazaki has significant differences to the novel, the first being that the story takes place during a war which heavily influences the plot direction, even though the main focus is Sophie and her adventure. Sophie meets Howl for the first time when he rescues her from soldiers who are harassing her by calling her 'Sweetheart' and apologizing for being late and saying he was looking 'everywhere' for her. He further casts a spell on them which forces them to march off. Howl then escorts Sophie to her younger sister Lettie's bakery, being followed by The Witch of the Waste's henchmen, he flies into the air, landing on the roof of the bakery.

When Sophie arrives at the castle, he seems to like her presence and allows her to clean so long as she "doesn't get carried away". All the while, he is routinely going out and fighting in the war using his magical powers for flight. Much to Calcifer's dismay as he believes that eventually Howl may not be able to change back.

After a particularly stressful night of battling his fellow sorcerers on the front lines of battle (using his flying abilities of course), Howl decides to take a bath the next morning. Unfortunately, Sophie rearranged his hair care potions which caused his normally blonde hair to turn ginger. Howl is furious at Sophie for this and throws a tantrum, resulting in his hair reverting back to its original appearance (that being a ravens black hue), He also calls upon the "Spirits of Darkness" as well as himself in a thick green slime that nearly snuffs out Calcifer and necessitates Sophie to redo the mopping. Howl (while recuperating from his tantrum in his bed), explains to Sophie about his current predicaments. Being a coward, having the Witch of the waste constantly trying to pursue him after he jilted her, and having to go to the king as both Wizard Pendragon and Jenkins. (Those both being his aliases). Sophie sighs unsurprised at the mention of Howl jilting the Witch of the waste and says that he should go and "give him (the king) a piece of his mind." Howl is surprised at first and looks confused but then slumps back onto his pillow musing that it would be pointless as the king does not work like that and he has to attend the meeting as he made an oath.

Then, quite suddenly, an idea flashes into Howl. He believes Sophie (being quite old due to the Witch of the wastes spell) could fool Madame Suliman into think that she is Pendragon's mother and that her son is such a coward he made her go in his place. Sophie (unsure who this Madame Suliman individual even is) begrudgingly agrees and so Howl sends her off, but not before telling her that he will follow close behind in disguise to make sure she's safe. He also gives her a ring that "will guarantee her safe return".

Howl sends her off and disguises as the king himself which temporarily fools Suliman. Unfortunately this plan is short lived as the real king walks in completely foiling the plan and forcing Howl to withstand a barrage of Suliman's magical attacks. One of which almost gets the better of him, however Sophie saves him just in time and together they escape in a flying machine.

While escaping in the flying machine, they are followed by some of Suliman's goons. That and Suliman's personal errand dog Heen and the now elderly Witch of the waste tag along too in Howl and Sophie's motor copter. Howl comments on this and how he didn't expect visitors to which Sophie quips back about how he didn't want to go. He explains that he finds Suliman very stern and frightening and that he needed Sophie to go ahead to test the waters as it were. He then, in a very grateful tone, thanks Sophie for saving him during Suliman's attacks. He then shows her how to engage a kind of gps tracker in the ring he gave her allowing her to go directly the castle while he creates a clone of the plane and leads the goons away.

In Sophie's dream, Howl returns to the castle late at night in his demon form much to the concern of Calcifer who believes he has gone too far and will soon be unable to change back. Sophie hears this, gets up from her bed and goes to Howl's room to investigate. Howl is unfazed and uncaring to Sophie's pleas for him to stop fighting and that she doesn't care if he is a demon. In fact, he flies off midway through Sophie's pleas, much to the latter's dismay.

The next day however, Howl seems far more jovial, laughing (good spiritedly) at Sophie for flying into the castles open mouth and saying to Calcifer: "I knew she'd make a good pilot." That day, he expands the house for their seemingly never ending family which now includes Turnip head, a scarecrow that Howl mentions has a nasty curse placed upon him.

Howl takes Sophie into his private flower garden, shows her where he did his wizard apprenticeship under his uncle and says that she start a flower shop with the readily abundant flowers which causes Sophie to become worried. She explains she doesn't want him to leave and says that she loves him even though she is not particularly beautiful. Howl staunchly refutes this statement and says that she in is fact beautiful and even if she is old he loves her deeply. This tender moment is broken however when a war zeppelin flies overhead causing Howl to curse them out as murderers and with a wave of his hand he detonates the bombs carried in the zeppelin causing it to be damaged but not to crash. Some demonic wizards transformed as large winged insects try and attack him and Sophie but he simply sprouts wings and drops Sophie back through the door into the castle and goes off to fight the attackers.

The next time Howl is seen onscreen is when he saves Sophie from an incoming bomb by riding on top of it and leading it away from her. It still blows up in the hat shop courtyard just meters away from Sophie and at first it seems Howl was injured or perhaps killed but miraculously he is unharmed. He and Sophie make it into the hat shop and away from the blob men patrolling the outside and Howl resuscitates Calcifer and just as quickly as he appeared he goes back out onto the front lines saying to Sophie that he doesn't want to run away anymore and that he wants to fight for their family.

Following the failed rescue attempt by Sophie and the near death of Calcifer (very nearly causing the death of Howl, as Calcifer was the vessel of Howl's heart) Sophie sees Howl's younger self when he first met Calcifer. Sophie is brought back to the present day and see that Howl has waited there patiently for her. He is still in his demon form but his human face is visible. Unfortunately he is completely unresponsive and his face is a ghostly pallor suggesting that he is clinging to what little life he has left. Fortunately, he has just enough strength to fly Sophie and Heen back to the castle. Although castle is perhaps over exaggerating as it now, with Calcifer in such a weakened state, has been reduced to a crumbling amalgamation of plywood and dutifully moving metal legs leading it very slowly to an unknown location.

Howl lands (or more accurately collapses) onto the moving structure, disperses his feathers and returns to his human self albeit still unconscious. In fact he looks so far gone Markl asks Sophie if he has died. Sophie says in a disheartened tone that he has not and after persuading the Witch of the Waste to give her Calcifer, she infuses Howl's heart back into him, freeing Calcifer and reviving Howl.

After Turnip head's true identity is revealed after Sophie breaks the spell on him, and Calcifer decides to rejoin their family, all is well. The war is over, Suliman is no longer a threat (and actually her dog Heen has decided to live with Howl and company from now on), Howl is his true human self once again, and Sophie and Howl's relationship has reached its pinnacle. The castle, repaired and restored, flies through the sunny sky, drifting amongst the clouds, while all of its occupants live their happy lives, content for the adventure to come. The end credits play and the film ends.

Castle in the Air (Novel)[]

It is a year later, and Sophie and Howl have married, and are expecting a child. While working on a divining spell for the King, Howl discovers that a djinn is going to steal the moving castle. He sends Michael and the new apprentice away, and wants to send Sophie away as well but she refuses to go. They argue about that, and while they are arguing the djinn arrives. Howl turns Sophie into a cat, and she is thrown out of the Castle. He tells Calcifer to save himself because the djinn is too strong for either of them. Howl is still in the Castle when the djinn comes, and Howl is turned into a genie by the djinn.

Howl is cursed so that he is unable to tell anyone that he is under a spell and no one is able to recognise him. Both Howl and Calcifer at some point find themselves in the hands of Abdullah, a carpet merchant, who has also lost his true love to the djinns. Howl is forced to grant a wish each day to Abdullah, although Howl uses his powers to cause as much trouble for Abdullah as possible. He later encounters the cat Sophie, who is named Midnight by Abdullah's companion the soldier, and finds that she has given birth to Morgan, who is a kitten. When Morgan is turned back into a baby, the Genie takes him to the castle in the air so he can keep an eye on him. Once the djinns are defeated, the Genie is turned back into Howl and he is reunited with Sophie, Morgan and Calcifer.

Appearance and Personality[]

Howl with blonde hair

In the movie adaptation, Howl has shoulder-length straight flaxen blonde hair, light blue eyes, and a pale complexion. He is tall and slender. Later on in the movie, Sophie Hatter cleans his bathroom and switches some hair potions, leaving Howl's formerly blonde hair a ginger color, which later turns a raven black colour. Howl is not very happy with this, and reacts by calling the shadows of darkness and covering himself with a see-through green slime in a particularly humorous scene. Though it is not entirely certain, Howl seems to cut his hair to a chin length bob hair cut after the meeting with Madame Sulliman although the length has changed so little it is difficult to say.

In the book of Howl's Moving Castle, Howl has "marble like" green eyes and it is unclear what his natural hair colour is. According to Calcifer, Howl is "very vain, for a plain looking man with mud-colored hair."

He uses charms and make up to make himself more attractive, as well as having a naturally engaging personality. Michael and Calcifer insist that the day Howl forgets to spend less than an hour in the bathroom is the day he is truly in love, a prediction which later turns out to be true. Howl wears flamboyant and fancy suits, claiming to Michael that "No one's going to employ a wizard if he looks like he can't make money at the trade" (although Sophie voices suspicions that really, he just likes clothes). The suit he wears most often is silver and blue though he later changes to his more favoured grey and scarlet one, later disguised as a black suit, when Howl goes into mourning for his tutor, Mrs Pentstemmon. Originally, it was just flashy, until Sophie accidentally darned magic into the seams by talking life into it, saying "[the suit is] built to pull in the girls."

Howl with black hair

Howl's hair is dyed occasionally, as he doesn't see why "people put so much value in things being natural". At the beginning of the book it is blonde, then a pinkish red color (this happened by accident, Sophie moved around his potions in the bathroom) and finally bluish-black, a color most people agree looks best on him, as it goes with his "glass green eyes". When Howl gets his heart back, his eyes become much less marble-like and more real looking.

Howl has a kind, generous personality. He allowed Michael and Sophie to live with him, and is very forgiving of their mistakes. He also gave Calcifer his heart when Calcifer was a dying falling star. His good traits, however, are masked by his more negative traits, as well as deliberate "blackening of his name", so very few people know of them. He hates to quarrel, and will "slither out" of situations he doesn't want to be in. He hates to be pinned down to anything, and is quite cowardly.

In addition to this, Howl has a somewhat child-like attitude, begging for attention and even throwing a tantrum. Despite his attention-seeking, self-absorbed nature, he's quite kind - or rather, is not wicked; "I'm too patient and too polite," as he put it.

The only way he can make himself do something brave is to tell himself he is running away. He also lies a lot, and likes to tease Sophie, though subtly. A good example of this is when he is pretending to be in love with Lettie to get information on Sophie, and he constantly goes on about her to make Sophie feel jealous. Howl's worst, or at least most troublesome trait, is his courting. He cannot rest until he has made a girl love him and becomes quite insensible, but once she loves him he swiftly forgets her.

This practice is where Howl got his reputation for eating hearts, as that is what rejected girls' angry aunts call it when they come looking for Howl. This practice also is why the Witch of the Waste cursed Howl, as she was jilted by him as well. Howl is very insensible with money, overcharging the rich and undercharging the poor, as well as spending too much too often. It is suspected that, when Howl gave Calcifer his heart, he lost some of his humanity. This is suggested by the progression of the Witch of the Waste, who had her fire demon for much longer than Howl. It is also suggested by Madam Pentstemmon, when she tells Sophie that Howl is "going to the bad."

Abilities[]

Howl's arm after using it for magic

Howl is a very talented wizard, and is also quite good at slithering out of things he does not wish to do - a talent he cultivated through his sister's unwitting aid - and can change into different animals (he's seen as a cat, a dog and an unidentified monster). In the movie, he is able to transform in to a large beast with black feathers and seemly various stages of transformation. He uses this power to fly to the battlefield and fight as well as to escape from enemies.

At one point in the movie, he 'zooms in', on a battleship when him and Sophie are in his garden, he passes walkways, slips past several henchmen, and goes to the heart of the airship where he unplugs several cables that stop all but one wing from working. But this magic seems to transform him into the beast:

Sophie: What did you do?

Howl: Just messed with it, it won't crash though.

Sophie sees that his finger nails have elongated into claws, and his forearm is starting to grow black feathers.

Appearance[]

Outside[]

The moving castle appears from the outside as a tall, off-balanced, black-brick castle with four square towers, and three doors. However, two of these doors cannot be approached at all, as though there were an invisible barrier blocking the way. Only the third door can be reached, which although is the back door of the castle, is the front door of the house within. The four towers often billow smoke, and the harder Calcifer works, the more smoke is issued. It is apparently made from coal.

Within[]

The inside of the castle is not at all what anyone might expect. In fact, it is not the inside of the castle at all. Upon entering the castle through its magical door, one actually enters into the house in which Calcifer is in. At first, this is the small cottage in Porthaven, though is moved to the hat shop house in Market Chipping. It consists only of a few small rooms on two floors, a parlor with a fireplace, and an entrance to a small yard where Wizard Howl creates many of his magical objects. There are however two windows that are not attached to the Porthaven/Market Chipping house. One is a tiny window above the door that Calcifer uses to see where he is steering the castle, and the other is in Howl's room, which views his sister's backyard in Wales so he can watch his niece and nephew from Ingary.

Appearance in the Movie[]

In the movie, the house and the castle seem to be interchangeable, with some doors and windows opening to the castle, while others open to Porthaven (or after the move, Market Chipping). This could be a reference to the windows in the original novel that opened to places other than Porthaven/Market Chipping. The castle is quite different in the movie, depicted as a hodgepodge of houses, mechanics, and even cannon stations that form a what appears to be a walking mechanical creature with chicken-like legs and a huge, frog-like face. It retains the four smoke towers. Grandma Sophie, upon seeing the castle for the first time in the Wastelands, comments on its ugliness.

The Moving Castle[]

Wizard Howl's Moving Castle[]

As mentioned above, Howl does indeed have a moving castle. Powered and steered by Calcifer, it roams the hillsides around the Chipping Valley, sometimes going as far as to the border of The Waste. How it moves is never precisely described in the books. In the movie, the castle itself is shown to have short, spindly legs that it uses to walk around.

The Magic Door[]

What truly makes Howl's castle a moving castle, however, is its unique front door. There is a small dial near the doorknob, and where the door leads to when opened depends on what color the dial is turned to. This allows the residents to jump many many miles nearly instantly.

Description

Sophie has the great misfortune of being the eldest of three daughters, destined to fail miserably should she ever leave home to seek her fate. But when she unwittingly attracts the ire of the Witch of the Waste, Sophie finds herself under a horrid spell that transforms her into an old lady. Her only chance at breaking it lies in the ever-moving castle in the hills: the Wizard Howl's castle. To untangle the enchantment, Sophie must handle the heartless Howl, strike a bargain with a fire demon, and meet the Witch of the Waste head-on. Along the way, she discovers that there's far more to Howl—and herself—than first meets the eye.

Plot Summary

At the beginning

The novel is about a young woman named Sophie Hatter who is the oldest of three daughters living in the town of Market Chipping in the kingdom of Ingary where many fairy-tales are accepted ways of life. As the eldest, she is resigned to the fact that she will have no chance of finding her fortune, accepting that she will have a dull life running the family hat shop. That is, until she is turned into an old lady by the Witch of the Waste, a powerful witch. Sophie leaves the shop and finds work as a cleaning lady for Wizard Howl, famous in her town for eating the hearts of young women. Sophie soon learns that Howl spreads these rumors about himself to keep his privacy. There are four doors to his castle, only one of which is real, and which is enchanted to open to four different places at one time.

Making a deal

Sophie encounters Howl's fire demon, Calcifer, when she first enters the castle. It is revealed later in the novel that Calcifer used to be a shooting star and was caught by Howl on his way down to Earth. Howl felt sorry for Calcifer and made a bargain with him to save his life: Howl gave Calcifer something very precious to him, his heart, and in return, Calcifer has to stay within the castle and heat and power it. Calcifer's only thought at the time was for him to do anything to stay alive, which caused him to agree to the deal immediately. However, as they both realized some years after the deal was made, that "the contract isn't doing either of us any good in the long run". Due to his lack of heart, Howl cannot truly love a woman (he goes after them and loses interest as soon as he had made them love him in return). Whereas Calcifer is forced to do all the strong magic to keep the moving castle going and has no real freedom of his own. Although he is bound to the hearth, Calcifer possesses a great amount of magic, which allows him to recognize the fact that Sophie is under a strong curse, along with her special ability to talk life into things. He wasted no time in trying to strike a bargain with her ("How about making a bargain with me? I'll break your spell if you agree to break this contract I'm under."). Sophie, although extremely suspicious, agrees to the deal ("All right, what are the terms of the contract? How do I break it?") in the hopes that the demon will keep his promise and break her spell. However, part of Calcifer and Howl's contract is that they are not allowed to tell people the exact terms, Sophie has to work it out on her own (with occasional hints from Calcifer, which, according to him, is allowed in the contract). At the end of the chapter Sophie reluctantly agrees to stay for about a month in the moving castle in order for CalciFer to work out how to break her spell and to guess the terms of the contract.

Setting

Ingary

Most of the novel is set in a fictional monarchy, Ingary; its capital is Kingsbury. Much of south-eastern Ingary is harsh wilderness referred to as "The Waste". Ingary is bordered by Strangia to the east and the Sultanates of Rashpuht to the south. Nearby is the country of High Norland; in the middle of the novel, the King of Ingary mentions that Ingary will likely be attacked by both Strangia and High Norland soon.

Before the move, the castle wanders over the hills between Market Chipping and Upper Folding in the north. Howl's house is in fact based in a seaside town named Porthaven; Howl also occupies a disguised stable in Kingsbury. Chapter Eleven takes place in Wales. After the move, the castle sits at the edge of the Waste and Howl's house is moved to Sophie's childhood home in Market Chipping; they also occupy a grand but derelict mansion in Vale End (which is in the same valley as Market Chipping).

The movie starts with Sophie Hatter, a timid girl of 18, decorating hats in the hat shop of her late father. Some of the other girls exclaim as they see Howl's Moving Castle near the city. Sophie leaves the shop, and is walking home when two soldiers harass her. It is then that she has a lucky encounter with the notorious Wizard Howl. He escorts her to the bakery of her sister, Lettie Hatter. They talk, and bid farewells. Sophie returns to the hat shop, also her home, when the Witch of the Waste walks into the shop. Jealous of Sophie's apparent relationship with Howl, she ages Sophie into a 90 year-old woman, and adds to that curse the curse of not being able to tell anyone who she really is or what happened to her.

The next morning, Sophie decides to leave the city to find a way to lift the curse. As she enters the countryside outside of the bustling town, she meets a magical scarecrow, whom she names Turnip-Head on account of his turnip- shaped head. Turnip- Head provides Sophie with a walking stick, and Sophie, wanting to get rid of the scarecrow, asks him to find her a house as well. She chuckles at her cunning, when the scarecrow returns, bringing Howl's Moving Castle with it. Sophie, deciding there is no other option, enters. Inside, she meets the fire demon, Calcifer, flickering in the hearth. He can see through the curse, and says he will break it if Sophie can break the contract between him and Howl. At first Sophie thinks it is a trick, but decides it isn't and dozes asleep.

The next morning, Sophie is still asleep while Markl, Howl's little apprentice comes down to answer the knock on the door. He receives a letter from the mayor of Porthaven and a soldier from Kingsbury, both summoning Howl (as Jenkins and Pendragon) to the king. Sophie wakes up and proceeds to cook breakfast for them. Much to Markl's surprise, Calcifer allows Sophie to cook by using his heat. Howl returns and questions who Sophie is. Sophie says she is his cleaning lady and Howl proceeds to finish cooking. As they dine, Howl asks Sophie that what is in her pocket. She gives him a letter from the Witch of the Waste, which was in her pocket all along. Howl removes the spell from the witch and leaves, but not before asking Calcifer to move the castle and prepare a hot bath for him.

Markl questions if Sophie works for the witch, causing her to get angry, thus giving her strength to clean the dirty castle. Sophie nearly kills Calcifer as he runs out of firewood. Howl saves Calcifer and tells Sophie not to get carried away. He then leaves. Sophie proceed to the second floor and after cleaning the bathroom, she enjoyed a breath-taking view outside with Markl. They also rescue Turnip who followed her. The castle stops by a lake and Sophie, Markl, and Turnip dry the laundry. After finishing, they return to the castle and that night, Howl returns. He informs Calcifer of the fighting and the fire demon warns Howl that he wouldn't be able to turn back to human form if he continued fighting.

The next morning, Sophie and Markl goes out shopping in Porthaven. They witness a heavily damaged battleship returning from the fight and also saw the Witch of the Waste's henchmen. An enemy airship drops a few bombs then release several propaganda flyers. The two return home only to find Howl wailing and pounding down the stairs. Howl's hair has turned an orange color since Sophie mixed up his bath potions when she cleaned yesterday. Howl later throws a tantrum claiming that he isn't beautiful. He summons the spirits of darkness and generates a green see-through liquid in a humorous manner.

Sophie gets mad and briefly runs away, being jealous because as an old woman, she was never beautiful. Turnip arrive and shields Sophie from the rain with an umbrella. She later returns and together with Markl, help Howl get to the bathroom. After a while, Howl is lying in bed while Sophie gives him some hot milk. Howl reveals that he is a coward and the castle is just sorcery to keep the Witch of the Waste away. Howl says that he once took interest in the witch but became scared after he knew she used magic to keep her beautiful. That's why the witch pursued him.

The king also asked him to report to the palace as Jenkins and Pendragon. Sophie asks that why Howl can't refuse outright, which is because the oath he made at Sorcery Academy. Howl creates a plan to send Sophie as his mother and tell the king that he couldn't come. Before going, Howl places a magic ring on her and tells her that he'll follow in disguise. Sophie walks to the palace and is followed by a dog who she believes is Howl in disguise. She meets the Witch of the Waste who is going to see the king, too. The witch takes the lead but is halted when her henchmen disintegrated due to spells casted around the palace. She leaves her palanquin and proceeds to climb the stairs.

Despite Sophie carrying the dog, she easily went ahead and the witch was terribly far behind, having great difficulty to climb the stairs. After they entered a room the witch sits down on a chair and rests. The dog runs away to another room and Sophie follows him. She is led to a garden by an aide, where she meets Suliman, the Royal Sorceress. Suliman discusses with Sophie that Howl is a student with marvelous gifts and its a shame that he won't join them. She continued Howl is a dangerous person who wields great power but has no heart. She states that if Howl won't join them she'll strip him off his powers like the Witch of the Waste.

She also informs Sophie of the Witch's history and reveals that the witch has already returned to her current age. Sophie figures some things out then tells Suliman of her peculiar tactics and explains that Howl just wants to be free. The love in her words weaken Sophie's aging curse, and Suliman realizes Sophie's relationships with Howl. Howl later arrives, disguised as the king. However, the real king appears shortly. Suliman sees through Howl's trick and tries to capture him.

URL: https://howlscastle.fandom.com/wiki/Howl%27s_Moving_Castle_\(audio_play\))

Howl's Moving Castle is an audio play produced by Bafflegab, adapted from the novel of the same name. The play was broadcast on BBC Radio 4 as part of the BBC's Drama on 4 slot.[1]

Plot[]

The plot remains true to the plot of the novel, but abbreviates and shortens much of its content in order to fit within a one-hour timeslot. For example, the subplot involving Jane Farrier and the Count of Catterack is omitted, as is the subplot concerning Martha and Lettie swapping places using an illusion spell.

Iwan Rheon: Howl

Julia McKenzie: Sophie (old)

Angus Imrie: Michael

Dan Starkey: Calcifer

Gwyneth Keyworth: Miss Angorian

Pippa Bennett-Warner: The Witch of the Waste

Dakota Blue Richards: Sophie (young)

Description

Sophie has the great misfortune of being the eldest of three daughters, destined to fail miserably should she ever leave home to seek her fate. But when she unwittingly attracts the ire of the Witch of the Waste, Sophie finds herself under a horrid spell that transforms her into an old lady. Her only chance at breaking it lies in the ever-moving castle in the hills: the Wizard Howl's castle. To untangle the enchantment, Sophie must handle the heartless Howl, strike a bargain with a fire demon, and meet the Witch of the Waste head-on. Along the way, she discovers that there's far more to Howl—and herself—than first meets the eye.

Plot Summary

At the beginning

The novel is about a young woman named Sophie Hatter who is the oldest of three daughters living in the town of Market Chipping in the kingdom of Ingary where many fairy-tales are accepted ways of life. As the eldest, she is resigned to the fact that she will have no chance of finding her fortune, accepting that she will have a dull life running the family hat shop. That is, until she is turned into an old lady by the Witch of the Waste, a powerful witch. Sophie leaves the shop and finds work as a cleaning lady for Wizard Howl, famous in her town for eating the hearts of young women. Sophie soon learns that Howl spreads these rumors about himself to keep his privacy. There are four doors to his castle, only one of which is real, and which is enchanted to open to four different places at one time.

Making a deal

Sophie encounters Howl's fire demon, Calcifer, when she first enters the castle. It is revealed later in the novel that Calcifer used to be a shooting star and was caught by Howl on his way down to Earth. Howl felt sorry for Calcifer and made a bargain with him to save his life: Howl gave Calcifer something very precious to him, his heart, and in return, Calcifer has to stay within the castle and heat and power it. Calcifer's only thought at the time was for him to do anything to stay alive, which caused him to agree to the deal immediately. However, as they both realized some years after the deal was made, that "the contract isn't doing either of us any good in the long run". Due to his lack of heart, Howl cannot truly love a woman (he goes after them and loses interest as soon as he had made them love him in return). Whereas Calcifer is forced to do all the strong magic to keep the moving castle going and has no real freedom of his own. Although he is bound to the hearth, Calcifer possesses a great amount of magic, which allows him to recognize the fact that Sophie is under a strong curse, along with her special ability to talk life into things. He wasted no time in trying to strike a bargain with her ("How about making a bargain with me? I'll break your spell if you agree to break this contract I'm under."). Sophie, although extremely suspicious, agrees to the deal ("All right, what are the terms of the contract? How do I break it?") in the hopes that the demon will keep his promise and break her spell. However, part of Calcifer and Howl's contract is that they are not allowed to tell people the exact terms, Sophie has to work it out on her own (with occasional hints from Calcifer, which, according to him, is allowed in the contract). At the end of the chapter Sophie reluctantly agrees to stay for about a month in the moving castle in order for CalciFer to work out how to break her spell and to guess the terms of the contract.

Setting

Ingary

Most of the novel is set in a fictional monarchy, Ingary; its capital is Kingsbury. Much of south-eastern Ingary is harsh wilderness referred to as "The Waste". Ingary is bordered by Strangia to the east and the Sultanates of Rashpuht to the south. Nearby is the country of High Norland; in the middle of the novel, the King of Ingary mentions that Ingary will likely be attacked by both Strangia and High Norland soon.

Before the move, the castle wanders over the hills between Market Chipping and Upper Folding in the north. Howl's house is in fact based in a seaside town named Porthaven; Howl also occupies a disguised stable in Kingsbury. Chapter Eleven takes place in Wales. After the move, the castle sits at the edge of the Waste and Howl's house is moved to Sophie's childhood home in Market Chipping; they also occupy a grand but derelict mansion in Vale End (which is in the same valley as Market Chipping).

Howl giving Sophie the ring Howl's ring emitting blue light Howl's Ring is a magical object that appears in the movie adaptation of Howl's Moving Castle. It holds a connection to Howl's heart within Calcifer. Calling out to Calcifer causes the small stone on it to emit a beam of light pointing in his direction.

It appears as a dark metal band with a small stone and several runes. Howl gives a similar ring to Sophie, placing it on her index finger before she goes out to the palace posing as his mother. He tells her that it guarantees her safe return, however doesn't have much faith in his words. Nearer to the end of the film, the ring emits a blue light instead of red, which leads Sophie to a doorway into Howl's childhood where she finds out how to save him.

History[]

Early Life (Novel)[]

Howl as a child

In the novel, Howl was born as Howell Jenkins to an ordinary family in modern-day Wales. However, he himself was anything but ordinary. Gifted with a natural talent for magic, he began studying it. Even in college, he wrote his thesis on magical spells and charms, and joined a group of other gifted magicians on Earth.

In Wales, Howl had a habit of going out with girls and then jilting them. In an attempt to hide from three angry rugby players whose sister he had jilted, he cast a spell that opened a portal to another land, Ingary, where he moved almost permanently. Still young, he took up tutelage under Mrs. Pentstemmon (or Madame Suliman in the movie). He became her last pupil, and one of her favorites (and best). His natural gift for magic showed, and he was quite powerful. He was in the same league as the Witch of the Waste. Howl is a wizard in the land of Ingary and he has several names; he is known as Wizard Howl in Market Chipping, "Wizard Pendragon" in the capital Kingsbury, and "Jenkins the Sorcerer" in lower-class Porthaven.

One night on the Porthaven Marshes, Howl caught a Falling Star named Calcifer and made a contract with him. He gave his heart to the creature, binding them together, and allowing Calcifer to live for he felt sorry for him, while boosting his own magical power. After doing so, Howl quit his apprenticeship and became a hermit. He dyed his hair and spent all his money on make-up and clothing, and spent his days wooing young ladies until they fell in love with him, and then jilted them. During this time, Howl found Michael Fisher sleeping on his doorstep, and invited him in. Howl was impressed by Calcifer's reaction to Michael. Though he never explicitly told Michael he could stay, Howl allowed him to live in the castle, eventually making him his apprentice. Also during this time, Howl courted and then dumped the Witch of the Waste, who put a curse on him.

Howl occasionally did work for the King's army, but avoided contact with them as much as possible.

Early Life (Movie)[]

In the film he is implied to be a native of Ingary, as multiple elements contradict his backstory in the novel:

He is shown as a child when he first encountered Calcifer and made the contract with him (Howl was already an adult when he arrived in Ingary in the novel).

Howl mentions that his cottage in the Garden used to belong to his uncle.

The black quarter of the dial on the revolving door has a different destination.

Other differences include his apprenticeship to Madame Suliman instead of Mrs. Pentstemmon, with Madame Suliman being the film version's Royal Wizard of Ingary.

The film is also more ambiguous regarding his Howl's romantic pursuits, as he had dated the Witch of the Waste, the people in town do gossip about Howl's tendency to chase after women, and he had at least one other romantic relationship (as Markl mention Howl summoning spirits of darkness when a girl broke up with him).

Howl's Moving Castle[]

Howl's Moving Castle (Novel)[]

It is during one of his outings to find a young woman that he first meets Sophie. Howl first meets Sophie on May Day in Market Chipping before the Witch of The Waste casts an aging spell on her. Days later he returns to the Castle and is surprised to find an old woman cooking bacon on Calcifer. Despite Michael and Calcifer's complaints, he allows Sophie to clean the castle, though he stops her from cleaning his room. Although he has been gathering clues about Suliman's disappearance, Howl is concerned the King wants him to find Prince Justin. He gets Sophie to pretend to be his mother and say bad things about him to the king, but the king is more impressed than annoyed, and hires him as Royal Wizard anyway. The very same day, Mrs Pentstemmon is killed by the Witch of the Waste. Howl is grieved and vows to attend Mrs Pentstemmon's funeral no matter what.

Howl battles with the Witch of the Waste after attending Mrs Penstemmon's funeral. Now that the Witch knows he lives in Porthaven, he decides to move the castle to escape. Taking Michael and Sophie's wishes into consideration, he takes the hat shop in Market Chipping so Michael stays close to Martha (his love interest), and orders Calcifer to find a nice house with lots of flowers for Sophie. Howl helps in the shop and discovers that a dog that stowed away with them is secretly a bespelled human. When Sophie admits that she knew about it he is furious with her. He restores the bespelled human to his human form and suspects he is made of Wizard Suliman and Prince Justin's body parts. Howl is stunned and terrified at this realization; he was counting on Wizard Suliman being alive.

On the night before Midsummer's Day, Howl goes to Wales for a Rugby League Reunion and gets himself drunk out of fear. He uses Sophie to get information out of him, which Sophie is later furious about. On Midsummer's Day, Howl arranges for Sophie's family to visit, to keep Sophie out of trouble. When Sophie falls into the Witch's trap, he goes into the Waste to rescue her. There, he finds the Witch and the scarecrow battling, and Howl kills the Witch. After hearing that the Witch's fire-demon has entered the Castle and touched his guitar, Howl raises a wind to bring himself and Sophie back to the Castle quickly to apprehend the demon. On the way, he finally explains his motives to Sophie.

His honesty seals his fate and in the Castle the Witch's fire demon, in the shape of Howl's nephew's English teacher, gets hold of Calcifer and squeezes the heart Howl had given Calcifer to keep him alive. Howl collapses but Sophie saves him by giving him his heart back. After breaking Howl's and Calcifer's contract, Calcifer breaks the spell on Sophie and Sophie returns to her true age. Howl destroys the Witch's fire demon, which restores Suliman and Prince Justin to their true forms, and asks Sophie to marry him.

Howl's Moving Castle (Movie)[]

The movie adaptation by Hayao Miyazaki has significant differences to the novel, the first being that the story takes place during a war which heavily influences the plot direction, even though the main focus is Sophie and her adventure. Sophie meets Howl for the first time when he rescues her from soldiers who are harassing her by calling her 'Sweetheart' and apologizing for being late and saying he was looking 'everywhere' for her. He further casts a spell on them which forces them to march off. Howl then escorts Sophie to her younger sister Lettie's bakery, being followed by The Witch of the Waste's henchmen, he flies into the air, landing on the roof of the bakery.

When Sophie arrives at the castle, he seems to like her presence and allows her to clean so long as she "doesn't get carried away". All the while, he is routinely going out and fighting in the war using his magical powers for flight. Much to Calcifer's dismay as he believes that eventually Howl may not be able to change back.

After a particularly stressful night of battling his fellow sorcerers on the front lines of battle (using his flying abilities of course), Howl decides to take a bath the next morning. Unfortunately, Sophie rearranged his hair care potions which caused his normally blonde hair to turn ginger. Howl is furious at Sophie for this and throws a tantrum, resulting in his hair reverting back to its original appearance (that being a ravens black hue), He also calls upon the "Spirits of Darkness" as well as himself in a thick green slime that nearly snuffs out Calcifer and necessitates Sophie to redo the mopping. Howl (while recuperating from his tantrum in his bed), explains to Sophie about his current predicaments. Being a coward, having the Witch of the waste constantly trying to pursue him after he jilted her, and having to go to the king as both Wizard Pendragon and Jenkins. (Those both being his aliases). Sophie sighs unsurprised at the mention of Howl jilting the Witch of the waste and says that he should go and "give him (the king) a piece of his mind." Howl is surprised at first and looks confused but then slumps back onto his pillow musing that it would be pointless as the king does not work like that and he has to attend the meeting as he made an oath.

Then, quite suddenly, an idea flashes into Howl. He believes Sophie (being quite old due to the Witch of the wastes spell) could fool Madame Suliman into think that she is Pendragon's mother and that her son is such a coward he made her go in his place. Sophie (unsure who this Madame Suliman individual even is) begrudgingly agrees and so Howl sends her off, but not before telling her that he will follow close behind in disguise to make sure she's safe. He also gives her a ring that "will guarantee her safe return".

Howl sends her off and disguises as the king himself which temporarily fools Suliman. Unfortunately this plan is short lived as the real king walks in completely foiling the plan and forcing Howl to withstand a barrage of Suliman's magical attacks. One of which almost gets the better of him, however Sophie saves him just in time and together they escape in a flying machine.

While escaping in the flying machine, they are followed by some of Suliman's goons. That and Suliman's personal errand dog Heen and the now elderly Witch of the waste tag along too in Howl and Sophie's motor copter. Howl comments on this and how he didn't expect visitors to which Sophie quips back about how he didn't want to go. He explains that he finds Suliman very stern and frightening and that he needed Sophie to go ahead to test the waters as it were. He then, in a very grateful tone, thanks Sophie for saving him during Suliman's attacks. He then shows her how to engage a kind of gps tracker in the ring he gave her allowing her to go directly the castle while he creates a clone of the plane and leads the goons away.

In Sophie's dream, Howl returns to the castle late at night in his demon form much to the concern of Calcifer who believes he has gone too far and will soon be unable to change back. Sophie hears this, gets up from her bed and goes to Howl's room to investigate. Howl is unfazed and uncaring to Sophie's pleas for him to stop fighting and that she doesn't care if he is a demon. In fact, he flies off midway through Sophie's pleas, much to the latter's dismay.

The next day however, Howl seems far more jovial, laughing (good spiritedly) at Sophie for flying into the castles open mouth and saying to Calcifer: "I knew she'd make a good pilot." That day, he expands the house for their seemingly never ending family which now includes Turnip head, a scarecrow that Howl mentions has a nasty curse placed upon him.

Howl takes Sophie into his private flower garden, shows her where he did his wizard apprenticeship under his uncle and says that she start a flower shop with the readily abundant flowers which causes Sophie to become worried. She explains she doesn't want him to leave and says that she loves him even though she is not particularly beautiful. Howl staunchly refutes this statement and says that she in is fact beautiful and even if she is old he loves her deeply. This tender moment is broken however when a war zeppelin flies overhead causing Howl to curse them out as murderers and with a wave of his hand he detonates the bombs carried in the zeppelin causing it to be damaged but not to crash. Some demonic wizards transformed as large winged insects try and attack him and Sophie but he simply sprouts wings and drops Sophie back through the door into the castle and goes off to fight the attackers.

The next time Howl is seen onscreen is when he saves Sophie from an incoming bomb by riding on top of it and leading it away from her. It still blows up in the hat shop courtyard just meters away from Sophie and at first it seems Howl was injured or perhaps killed but miraculously he is unharmed. He and Sophie make it into the hat shop and away from the blob men patrolling the outside and Howl resuscitates Calcifer and just as quickly as he appeared he goes back out onto the front lines saying to Sophie that he doesn't want to run away anymore and that he wants to fight for their family.

Following the failed rescue attempt by Sophie and the near death of Calcifer (very nearly causing the death of Howl, as Calcifer was the vessel of Howl's heart) Sophie sees Howl's younger self when he first met Calcifer. Sophie is brought back to the present day and see that Howl has waited there patiently for her. He is still in his demon form but his human face is visible. Unfortunately he is completely unresponsive and his face is a ghostly pallor suggesting that he is clinging to what little life he has left. Fortunately, he has just enough strength to fly Sophie and Heen back to the castle. Although castle is perhaps over exaggerating as it now, with Calcifer in such a weakened state, has been reduced to a crumbling amalgamation of plywood and dutifully moving metal legs leading it very slowly to an unknown location.

Howl lands (or more accurately collapses) onto the moving structure, disperses his feathers and returns to his human self albeit still unconscious. In fact he looks so far gone Markl asks Sophie if he has died. Sophie says in a disheartened tone that he has not and after persuading the Witch of the Waste to give her Calcifer, she infuses Howl's heart back into him, freeing Calcifer and reviving Howl.

After Turnip head's true identity is revealed after Sophie breaks the spell on him, and Calcifer decides to rejoin their family, all is well. The war is over, Suliman is no longer a threat (and actually her dog Heen has decided to live with Howl and company from now on), Howl is his true human self once again, and Sophie and Howl's relationship has reached its pinnacle. The castle, repaired and restored, flies through the sunny sky, drifting amongst the clouds, while all of its occupants live their happy lives, content for the adventure to come. The end credits play and the film ends.

Castle in the Air (Novel)[]

It is a year later, and Sophie and Howl have married, and are expecting a child. While working on a divining spell for the King, Howl discovers that a djinn is going to steal the moving castle. He sends Michael and the new apprentice away, and wants to send Sophie away as well but she refuses to go. They argue about that, and while they are arguing the djinn arrives. Howl turns Sophie into a cat, and she is thrown out of the Castle. He tells Calcifer to save himself because the djinn is too strong for either of them. Howl is still in the Castle when the djinn comes, and Howl is turned into a genie by the djinn.

Howl is cursed so that he is unable to tell anyone that he is under a spell and no one is able to recognise him. Both Howl and Calcifer at some point find themselves in the hands of Abdullah, a carpet merchant, who has also lost his true love to the djinns. Howl is forced to grant a wish each day to Abdullah, although Howl uses his powers to cause as much trouble for Abdullah as possible. He later encounters the cat Sophie, who is named Midnight by Abdullah's companion the soldier, and finds that she has given birth to Morgan, who is a kitten. When Morgan is turned back into a baby, the Genie takes him to the castle in the air so he can keep an eye on him. Once the djinns are defeated, the Genie is turned back into Howl and he is reunited with Sophie, Morgan and Calcifer.

Appearance and Personality[]

Howl with blonde hair

In the movie adaptation, Howl has shoulder-length straight flaxen blonde hair, light blue eyes, and a pale complexion. He is tall and slender. Later on in the movie, Sophie Hatter cleans his bathroom and switches some hair potions, leaving Howl's formerly blonde hair a ginger color, which later turns a raven black colour. Howl is not very happy with this, and reacts by calling the shadows of darkness and covering himself with a see-through green slime in a particularly humorous scene. Though it is not entirely certain, Howl seems to cut his hair to a chin length bob hair cut after the meeting with Madame Sulliman although the length has changed so little it is difficult to say.

In the book of Howl's Moving Castle, Howl has "marble like" green eyes and it is unclear what his natural hair colour is. According to Calcifer, Howl is "very vain, for a plain looking man with mud-colored hair."

He uses charms and make up to make himself more attractive, as well as having a naturally engaging personality. Michael and Calcifer insist that the day Howl forgets to spend less than an hour in the bathroom is the day he is truly in love, a prediction which later turns out to be true. Howl wears flamboyant and fancy suits, claiming to Michael that "No one's going to employ a wizard if he looks like he can't make money at the trade" (although Sophie voices suspicions that really, he just likes clothes). The suit he wears most often is silver and blue though he later changes to his more favoured grey and scarlet one, later disguised as a black suit, when Howl goes into mourning for his tutor, Mrs Pentstemmon. Originally, it was just flashy, until Sophie accidentally darned magic into the seams by talking life into it, saying "[the suit is] built to pull in the girls."

Howl with black hair

Howl's hair is dyed occasionally, as he doesn't see why "people put so much value in things being natural". At the beginning of the book it is blonde, then a pinkish red color (this happened by accident, Sophie moved around his potions in the bathroom) and finally bluish-black, a color most people agree looks best on him, as it goes with his "glass green eyes". When Howl gets his heart back, his eyes become much less marble-like and more real looking.

Howl has a kind, generous personality. He allowed Michael and Sophie to live with him, and is very forgiving of their mistakes. He also gave Calcifer his heart when Calcifer was a dying falling star. His good traits, however, are masked by his more negative traits, as well as deliberate "blackening of his name", so very few people know of them. He hates to quarrel, and will "slither out" of situations he doesn't want to be in. He hates to be pinned down to anything, and is quite cowardly.

In addition to this, Howl has a somewhat child-like attitude, begging for attention and even throwing a tantrum. Despite his attention-seeking, self-absorbed nature, he's quite kind - or rather, is not wicked; "I'm too patient and too polite," as he put it.

The only way he can make himself do something brave is to tell himself he is running away. He also lies a lot, and likes to tease Sophie, though subtly. A good example of this is when he is pretending to be in love with Lettie to get information on Sophie, and he constantly goes on about her to make Sophie feel jealous. Howl's worst, or at least most troublesome trait, is his courting. He cannot rest until he has made a girl love him and becomes quite insensible, but once she loves him he swiftly forgets her.

This practice is where Howl got his reputation for eating hearts, as that is what rejected girls' angry aunts call it when they come looking for Howl. This practice also is why the Witch of the Waste cursed Howl, as she was jilted by him as well. Howl is very insensible with money, overcharging the rich and undercharging the poor, as well as spending too much too often. It is suspected that, when Howl gave Calcifer his heart, he lost some of his humanity. This is suggested by the progression of the Witch of the Waste, who had her fire demon for much longer than Howl. It is also suggested by Madam Pentstemmon, when she tells Sophie that Howl is "going to the bad."

Abilities[]

Howl's arm after using it for magic

Howl is a very talented wizard, and is also quite good at slithering out of things he does not wish to do - a talent he cultivated through his sister's unwitting aid - and can change into different animals (he's seen as a cat, a dog and an unidentified monster). In the movie, he is able to transform in to a large beast with black feathers and seemly various stages of transformation. He uses this power to fly to the battlefield and fight as well as to escape from enemies.

At one point in the movie, he 'zooms in', on a battleship when him and Sophie are in his garden, he passes walkways, slips past several henchmen, and goes to the heart of the airship where he unplugs several cables that stop all but one wing from working. But this magic seems to transform him into the beast:

Sophie: What did you do?

Howl: Just messed with it, it won't crash though.

Sophie sees that his finger nails have elongated into claws, and his forearm is starting to grow black feathers.

The Folding Valley[]

Main article: Market Chipping

The Folding Valley is a large fertile valley through which a river runs. It has only one known town, called Market Chipping. It is surrounded by many small farms. Wizard Howl often lets his moving castle wander the hills on either side of the valley, and often goes into the town to seduce women. Market Chipping is home to Sophie Hatter and her family. It is also where the house that Abdullah and Flower-in-the-Night reside in is located.

The Coast[]

Main article: Porthaven

Ingary has only one known coastline. Many of the villages along this coast are poor, such as the small town of Porthaven, where Jenkin the Sorcerer has a home. This "base" of sorts is where Calcifer truly is. The Porthaven marshes are a wetland located just inland of the town.

In the movie, the Ingarian navy sails through, or possibly out of, Porthaven and returned after being defeated. The enemy dropped propaganda fliers over the town after a quick attack.

Kingsbury[]

Main article: Kingsbury

Kingsbury is the rich capital of Ingary. The palace of the King of Ingary sits above the rest of the town. It is surrounded by many hills and mountains.

The Waste[]

Main article: The Waste

The Waste are a large desert wasteland beyond the hills of the Folding Valley. The Witch of the Waste, whose true name is now forgotten, was banished here fifty years prior to the story's beginning. Wizard Suliman and Wizard Howl created a garden along its border with various flowers using their magic.

People[]

The people of Ingary (called Ingarians in the second book) are at odds with Strangia. They also have laws that make the eldest person of three siblings have a dull life.

Technology[]

In the Books[]

In the books, the land of Ingary and the kingdoms surrounding seem to be pre-industrial societies. There is never any mention of even anything so advanced as steam-driven engines. Likewise, when Sophie Hatter goes to Wales with Howl Jenkins Pendragon, modern clothes seem strange, and they had no idea what electricity or cars were. This is likely due to the widespread use of magic.

In the Movies []

In the movies, however, Ingary has reached the industrial age. There are steam trains, trolleys, buses, and early cars. There is also quite an impressive display of flying machines, ranging from Flying Kayaks to massive Battleships. However, most people still make do in pre-industrial settings, using the technological advances only in the busiest areas. Battleship

Early life[]

Simmons was born on 31 January 1929, in Islington, London, to Charles Simmons, a bronze medalist in gymnastics at the 1912 Summer Olympics, and his wife, Winifred Ada (nee Loveland). Jean was the youngest of four children, with siblings Lorna, Harold and Edna. She began acting at the age of 14.

During the Second World War, the Simmons family was evacuated to Winscombe, Somerset. Her father, a physical education teacher, taught briefly at Sidcot School, and some time during this period, Simmons followed her eldest sister onto the village stage and sang popular songs such as "Daddy Wouldn't Buy Me a Bow Wow". At this point, her ambition was to be an acrobatic dancer.

Early films[]

On her return to London, Simmons enrolled at the Aida Foster School of Dance. She was spotted by director Val Guest, who cast her in the Margaret Lockwood vehicle Give Us the Moon (1944) in a large role as Lockwood's sister. Small roles in several other films followed, including Mr. Emmanuel (1944), Kiss the Bride Goodbye (1945), Meet Sexton Blake (1945), and the popular The Way to the Stars (1945), as well as the short Sports Day (1945).

Simmons had a small part as a harpist in the high-profile Caesar and Cleopatra (1945), produced by Gabriel Pascal, starring Vivien Leigh, and co-starring Simmons's future husband Stewart Granger. Pascal saw potential in Simmons, and in 1945 he signed her to a seven-year contract to the J. Arthur Rank Organisation.

Great Expectations and stardom[]

Simmons became a star in Britain when she was cast as the young Estella in David Lean's version of Great Expectations (1946). The movie was the third-most popular film at the British box office in 1947, and Simmons received excellent reviews.

The experience of working on Great Expectations caused her to pursue an acting career more seriously:

I thought acting was just a lark, meeting all those exciting movie stars, and getting 5 euros a day which was lovely because we needed the money. But I figured I'd just go off and get married and have children like my mother. It was working with David Lean that convinced me to go on.

Simmons had support roles in Hungry Hill (1947) with Margaret Lockwood and the Powell-Pressburger film Black Narcissus (1947), playing an Indian woman in the latter alongside Sabu.

Simmons was top-billed for the first time in the drama Uncle Silas (1947). She followed it with The Woman in the Hall (1947). Neither was particularly successful; but Simmons was then in a huge international hit, playing Ophelia in Laurence Olivier's Hamlet (1948), for which she received her first Oscar nomination. Olivier offered her the chance to work and study at the Old Vic, advising her to play anything they offered her to get experience; but she was under contract to Rank, which vetoed the idea.

Simmons had the lead in Frank Launder's The Blue Lagoon (1949), based on the novel by Henry De Vere Stacpoole and co-produced with Launder's partner Sidney Gilliat, a project originally announced for Lockwood a decade earlier. It was a considerable financial success.

Stewart Granger[]

Simmons starred with Stewart Granger in the comedy Adam and Evelyne (1949). It was her first adult role, and Granger and she became romantically involved; they soon married.

Simmons made two films that were popular at the local box office: So Long at the Fair (1950) with Dirk Bogarde and Trio (1950), where she was one of several stars. She was the in Cage of Gold (1950) with David Farrar and Ralph Thomas' The Clouded Yellow (1950) with Trevor Howard. In 1950, Simmons was voted the most-popular star in Britain.

Howard Hughes and Victor Mature[]

Granger became a Hollywood star in King Solomon's Mines (1950) and was signed to a contract by MGM, so Simmons moved to Los Angeles with him. In 1951, Rank sold her contract to Howard Hughes, who then owned RKO Pictures.

Hughes was eager to start a sexual relationship with Simmons, but Granger put a stop to his advances by angrily telling Hughes over the phone: "Mr Howard bloody Hughes, you'll be sorry if you don't leave my wife alone." Her first Hollywood film was Androcles and the Lion (1952), produced by Pascal and co-starring Victor Mature. It was followed by Angel Face (1953), directed by Otto Preminger with Robert Mitchum. According to David Thomson, "If she had made only one film—Angel Face—she might now be spoken of with the awe given to Louise Brooks." Smarting over his rebuff from Granger, Hughes instructed Preminger to treat Simmons as roughly as possible, leading the director to demand that costar Mitchum repeatedly slap the actress harder and harder, until Mitchum turned and punched Preminger, asking if that was how he wanted it.

To further punish Simmons and Granger, Hughes refused to lend her to Paramount where director William Wyler wanted to cast her in the female lead for his film Roman Holiday; the role made a star of Audrey Hepburn. He also made her appear in She Couldn't Say No (1954), a comedy with Mitchum.

A court case freed Simmons from the contract with Hughes in 1952. They settled out of court; part of the arrangement was that Simmons would do one more film for no additional money. Simmons also agreed to make three more movies under the auspices of RKO, but not actually at that studio—she would be lent out. She would make an additional picture for 20th Century Fox while RKO got the services of Victor Mature for one film.

MGM cast her in the lead of Young Bess (1953) playing a young Queen Elizabeth I with Granger. She went back to RKO to do the extra film under the settlement with Hughes, titled Affair with a Stranger (1953) with Mature; it flopped.

20th Century Fox[]

Simmons went over to 20th Century Fox to play the female lead in The Robe (1953), the first CinemaScope movie and an enormous financial success. Less popular was The Actress (1953) at MGM alongside Spencer Tracy; it was one of her personal favorites.[citation needed]

Fox asked Simmons back for The Egyptian (1954), another epic, but it was not especially popular. She had the lead in Columbia's A Bullet Is Waiting (1954). More widely seen was Désirée (1954), where Simmons played Désirée Clary to Marlon Brando's Napoleon Bonaparte.

Simmons and Granger returned to England to make the thriller Footsteps in the Fog (1955). Then, Joseph Mankiewicz cast her opposite Brando in the screen adaptation of Guys and Dolls (1955), playing a role turned down by Grace Kelly; it was a big hit.

Simmons played the title role in Hilda Crane (1956) at Fox, a box-office disappointment. So, too, were This Could Be the Night (1957) and Until They Sail (1957), both at MGM.

Simmons had a big success, though, in The Big Country (1958), directed by William Wyler. She starred in Home Before Dark (1958) at Warner Bros. and This Earth Is Mine (1959) with Rock Hudson at Universal. In the opinion of film critic Philip French, Home Before Dark was "perhaps her finest performance as a housewife driven into a breakdown in Mervyn LeRoy's psychodrama."

Elmer Gantry and Richard Brooks[]

Simmons went into Elmer Gantry (1960), directed by Richard Brooks, who became her second husband. It was successful, as was Spartacus (1960), where she played Kirk Douglas' love interest. Simmons then did The Grass Is Greener (1960) with Mitchum, Cary Grant, and Deborah Kerr.

She took some years off screen, then returned in All the Way Home (1963) with Robert Preston. She did Life at the Top (1965) with Laurence Harvey, Mister Buddwing (1966) with James Garner, Divorce American Style (1967) with Dick Van Dyke, and Rough Night in Jericho (1967) with George Peppard and Dean Martin.

Simmons did Heidi (1968) for TV, then Brooks wrote and directed The Happy Ending (1969) for her, and she received her second Oscar nomination.

1970s, and 1980s[]

By the 1970s, Simmons turned her focus to stage and television acting. She toured the United States in Stephen Sondheim's A Little Night Music, then took the show to London, thus originated the role of Desirée Armfeldt in the West End. Performing in the show for three years, she said she never tired of Sondheim's music; "No matter how tired or 'off' you felt, the music would just pick you up."

She portrayed Fiona "Fee" Cleary, the Cleary family matriarch, in the miniseries The Thorn Birds (1983); she won an Emmy Award for her role. She appeared in North and South (1985–86), again playing the role of the family matriarch as Clarissa Main, and starred in The Dawning (1988) with Anthony Hopkins and Hugh Grant. In 1989, Simmons appeared as murder mystery author Eudora McVeigh Shipton, a self proclaimed rival to Jessica Fletcher, in the two part Murder, She Wrote episode "Mirror, Mirror, On the Wall" with Angela Lansbury.

1990s and 2000s[]

In 1991, she made a late-career appearance in the Star Trek: The Next Generation episode "The Drumhead" as a retired Starfleet admiral and hardened legal investigator who conducts a witch hunt. That same year she starred in a remake of Great Expectations, this time playing the role of Miss Havisham, Estella's adoptive mother, and as Elizabeth Collins Stoddard/Naomi Collins, in the short-lived revival of the 1960s daytime series Dark Shadows, in roles originally played by Joan Bennett. From 1994 until 1998, Simmons narrated the A&E documentary television series Mysteries of the Bible. In 1995, she appeared in "How to Make an American Quilt" with: Wynona Ryder, Maya Angelou, Ellen Burstyn, Anne Baxter, and Alfre Woodard. In 2004, she voiced the lead role of Sophie in the English dub of Howl's Moving Castle.

Personal life[]

Simmons was married and divorced twice. At 21, she married Stewart Granger in Tucson, Arizona on 20 December 1950. She and Granger became U.S. citizens in 1956; in the same year, their daughter Tracy Granger was born. They divorced in 1960.

On 1 November 1960, Simmons married director Richard Brooks; their daughter, Kate Brooks, was born a year later in 1961. Simmons and Brooks divorced in 1980. Although both men were significantly older than Simmons, she denied she was looking for a father figure. Her father had died when she was just 16, but she said: "They were really nothing like my father at all. My father was a gentle, softly spoken man. My husbands were both much noisier and much more opinionated ... it's really nothing to do with age ... it's to do with what's there – the twinkle and sense of humour." And in a 1984 interview, given in Copenhagen at the time she was shooting the film Going Undercover (1988, aka, Yellow Pages, completed 1985) she elaborated slightly on her marriages, stating, It may be simplistic, but you could sum up my two marriages by saying that, when I wanted to be a wife, Jimmy (Stewart Granger) would say: "I just want you to be pretty." And when I wanted to cook, Richard would say: "Forget the cooking. You've been trained to act – so act!" Most people thought I was quite helpless – a clinger and a butterfly – during my first marriage. It was Richard Brooks who saw what was wrong and tried to make me stand on my own two feet. I'd whine: 'I'm afraid.' And he'd say: 'Never be afraid to fail. Every time you get up in the morning, you are ahead.'Simmons had two daughters, Tracy Granger (a film editor since 1990), and Kate Brooks (a TV production assistant and producer), one by each marriage – their names bearing witness to Simmons's friendship with Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn. Simmons moved to the East Coast of the US in the late 1970s, briefly owning a home in New Milford, Connecticut. She returned to California, settling in Santa Monica, California, where she lived until her death.

In the 2003 New Year Honours, Simmons was appointed an Officer of the Order of the British Empire (OBE) for services to acting.

In 2003, she became the patron of the British drugs and human rights charity Release. In 2005, she signed a petition to British Prime Minister Tony Blair asking him not to upgrade cannabis from a class C drug to class B.

Death[]

Simmons died from lung cancer at her home in Santa Monica on 22 January 2010, nine days before her 81st birthday. She is interred in Highgate Cemetery, north London.

Box office ranking[]

For a number of years, British film exhibitors voted Simmons among the top ten British stars at the box office via an annual poll in the Motion Picture Herald.

King Adolphus X is the elderly king of High Norland and the father of Princess Hilda.

Physical description[]

The King is described as a large, elderly man with a neatly-trimmed marmoreal-coloured beard and kindly eyes of blue, and dressed in far more humble attire than his daughter.[1]

Personality[]

The King is described by Sim as an apparent canine aficionado having attempted to befriend them and having been bitten by them several times.[2] He appears to be entirely dependent on the aid of his daughter, as Hasruel mocked him behind his back for relying on his daughter to help him organise his library, and stating that, by comparison, Abdullah was far more proactive in attempting to rescue anyone than Adolphus ever was.[3]

Story[]

Wales[]

Lily Angorian is first seen during Sophie Hatter and Michael Fisher's first trip to Wales with Howl Jenkins Pendragon. On the hunt for a lost spell and the second half of a poem-cum-curse, the wizard takes them to the house of his nephew's English teacher. As with many women, Howl falls instantly in love with Miss Angorian, who becomes his next target of courting. However, she responds on the trip by being quite short, and dislikes Howl much based on first impressions and community rumors about the estranged Mr. Jenkins. She returns the spell, while telling Howl the second half of the poem. Learning the full meaning of the Witch of the Waste's curse, he takes Sophie and Michael back to Ingary.

Courting the Teacher[]

However, Howl was not swayed by Miss Angorian's attitude. For some time, he returned over and over to Wales in attempt to woo Miss Angorian, forgetting about his previous target, Lettie Hatter. However, she proved a much more difficult woman to crack than any of his previous attempts. It was nearly midsummer, the day his curse would come true, before she began to succumb to his charm.

Midsummer[]

On Midsummer Day, during a grand reunion in Howl's Castle while Howl slept off his hangover, Miss Angorian arrived through the magic door in Ingary, where she seemed quite out of place amongst the friends and relatives. However, she recognized the guitar of her ex-boyfriend Ben Sullivan resting in the corner of parlor, and refused to leave. She waited for some time in the parlor for Howl to awaken, though finally exited the door through the wrong setting and ended up in The Waste Garden.

Not too long after, Calcifer erupts, calling out to Howl that the Witch had discovered his family in Wales. Howl flew downstairs and through the door to the other world, and the guests of the castle watched through the window of his bedroom as he saved his niece and nephew from her grasp. The Witch however warned him that his new love was next to be taken.

Sophie, realizing that she had left Miss Angorian outside the castle and vulnerable, went to find her. Seeing that she was no longer in the garden, flies across The Waste in Howl's Seven-League Boots to the Witch of the Waste's castle. Howl swiftly follows to rescue her, defeating the Witch quite easily. He flies Sophie back across the Waste, explaining to her on the way that the Witch was not the real threat, but it was instead her Fire Demon, who had by now nearly consumed her, who was his true antagonist. The demon had sealed itself in Ben Sullivan's guitar, and when they returned to the castle, it burst revealing Miss Angorian, the real witch who had cursed Howl in an attempt to steal his heart and combine his body with Wizard Suliman's and Prince Justin's.

She was defeated though, and Miss Angorian vanished in the parlor of Howl's Castle when he snuffed out the Witch's fragile heart.

Trivia[]

She does not appear in the movie, however she is referenced when Madam Suliman drains the Witch of the Waste's powers as she states that the witch "fell prey to a demon of greed, who consumed her body and soul".

While her true name goes unmentioned in the novel, the BBC radio drama adaptation gives it as Pantherma. In that adaptation, Angorian is portrayed by Gwyneth Keyworth.[1]

Madame Suliman is the main villain in Howl's Moving Castle movie adaptation. She is a combination of Mrs. Pentstemmon and Wizard Sulliman in the book.

Howl's Moving Castle (Movie)[]

Madame Suliman serves as the King's Royal Sorcerer who provides magic for the country's military forces and the King's personal use. She uses her power to hunt down wizards and witches across the kingdom, taking them in as apprentices and turning them into monsters to serve in the army, or stripping them of their power if they refuse.

Madame Suliman in the castle

Madame Suliman has a special liking for Howl as she expresses her regret of Howl not arriving to the palace saying that she had finally found someone that could replace her. She says this to Sophie who is posing as Howl's mother upon his request to avoid going to the palace. Madame Suliman however realises who Sophie truly is, and that she is in love with Howl. Howl arrives at the castle disguised as the King, Madame Suliman recognizes him because of his "eloquent" speech and the real King's appearance.

'Rather a weak disguise, didn't I teach you better?'

Madam Suliman casting the spell to transform Howl

As Howl proceeds to leave, Madame Suliman casts a spell revealing to Sophie what Howl 'really' is, his beast/feathered form. Before the spell is complete and Howl completely transforms, Sophie saves him by calling his name and covering his eyes. Madame Suliman's spell is left incomplete as her magic pink glowing stick hits her hat instead.

Madame Suliman is voiced by Blythe Danner in the English version.

Abilities[]

Madame Suliman has proven to be a very powerful witch since even Howl has a certain respect and care for her, she is able to take away the magic of very powerful wizards and witches such as The Waste Witch, cast powerful illusion and revelation spells just by moving her staff and even make cursed people reveal their cursed forms.

Trivia[]

- Madam Suliman is perhaps the most powerful character in the movie.
- It is revealed that she was the one who banished the Witch to the Waste; in the book, it is the king who does banishes her.
- Ironically, both Madam Pentstemmon and Wizard Suliman, of whom Madam Suliman is combined, were defeated by the Witch of the Waste in the book.

Locales[]

Market Chipping[]

The story begins in Market Chipping, Sophie's home town. It is vibrant and lively and the location of the flower shop (formerly the hat shop belonging to the Hatter family) after Howl moves Calcifer. Cesari's (the pastry shop owned by Mrs. Cesari) is also located here. Other locations include Market Square.

Upper Folding[]

North of Market Chipping (about 21 miles), Upper Folding is located on the opposite side of the heather hills where Howl's Castle primarily wanders. It is home to Mrs. Annabel Fairfax, a witch who uses honey in many of her spells.

Bordering the Waste[]

The land bordering the Waste, as with the edge of Market Chipping, mainly consists of farms and pastures.

Story[]

Howl's Moving Castle (Book)[]

The Folding Valley is the very first setting introduced in the books. After Mr. Hatter dies, Lettie and Martha are sent away, with Lettie working at Cesari's and Martha to be apprenticed to Mrs. Annabel Fairfax. On May Day, Sophie runs into a young man (later revealed to be Howl) on Market Square and hurries to Cesari's to find that Lettie and Martha have switched places due to Lettie's desire to learn magic and Martha's desire to get married and have ten children. After the Witch of the Waste turns Sophie into an old woman, she leaves the hat shop and goes to Howl's Castle. Later in the book, the hat shop is turned into a flower shop after Howl moves Calcifer following the duel between himself and the Witch of the Waste.

Howl's Moving Castle (Movie)[link]

The Folding Valley is very different in the film. The mountains and hills are called the Waste, while the Waste was a wasteland in the book.

Title: Martha Hatter

URL: https://howlscastle.fandom.com/wiki/Martha_Hatter

Martha Hatter is Sophie Hatter's youngest sister. It is said that the youngest of three is the one who will make their fortune in life, so Martha was considered blessed by birth.

Roles in books and movies[]

Howl's Moving Castle (Book)[]

Martha Hatter is Sophie's youngest sister. She is slender and fair with big grey eyes, but known to be the smartest of the three Hatter sisters. As such, Fanny arranges her to become Mrs. Fairfax's apprentice, though Martha and Lettie Hatter switch appearances temporarily in order to switch places. Martha happily works as an apprentice at Cesari's, a renowned pastry shop, and her ambition is to get married and have ten children. She is in a relationship with Michael Fisher.

Trivia[]

Though never shown or talked about in the movie, Martha does have a tiny cameo. When Sophie makes her way to the foothills of the nearby mountains and passes a farmer's cottage, the farmer makes a mention of her saying she "was looking for her younger sister." This sister would be Martha, who would still be with Mrs. Fairfax up in the hills, if Lettie was still in Market Chipping. Also, in the beginning of the movie, when the hatshop workers are talking about Howl, they mention that Howl tore the heart out of a girl named Martha.

Matilda II

Not to be confused with Matilda Regis.

Matilda II was one of the Nine Bad Cousins of High Norland. According to Peter Regis, she became a witch so absolutely evil that Prince Ludovic, her second cousin, had her incarcerated within his home of Castel Joie, with him largely keeping a safe distance from her, with rumours circulating that she would kill people simply by gazing at them.[1]

Matilda Regis

Title: Matilda Regis

URL: https://howlscastle.fandom.com/wiki/Matilda_Regis

Matilda of Montalbino is the incumbent Witch of Montalbino and Peter Regis' mother.

Biography[]

Matilda was born as a cousin to the royal family of High Norland, and the fifth in the line of succession for the kingdom's throne, which she was not interested, being more interested in witchcraft than anything to do with statecraft. At some point she married her cousin Hans Nicholas and gave birth to Peter.[1] They moved to Montalbino where Matilda became a witch and Hans a mountaineer and adventurer. Matilda would later travel to Ingary to study magic under the distinguished sorceress Mrs Pentstemmon.[2] She would later consult Pentstemmon about how to keep her husband and son safe, and would later discover from her Ludovic's true identity as a lubbockin.[3]

Physical description[]

Matilda is described as having a "sun-weathered" countenance, "narrow" hands and being dressed in attire less evocative of a typical witch in fantasy fiction and more akin to a Romani, with "bright" albeit faded colours.[4]

Michael Fisher is an orphan boy who serves under Wizard Howl as an apprentice. A similar role to him in the movie adaptation of the book is Markl.

Story[]

Howl's Moving Castle[]

Michael was kicked out of his old house in Porthaven before the beginning of the story, because he couldn't pay the rent. He slept on Howl's doorstep that night, and Howl made him his apprentice a few months after he told Michael to wait on the doorstep. Calcifer activates fireworks on Michael's fifteenth birthday. Michael meets Sophie Hatter and introduces himself. The next day, he and Calcifer stop Sophie from cleaning the castle. He also visits Wales along with Howl (who is known there as Howell Jenkin) and Sophie in search of a poem which also serves as the terms of Howl's curse. Later in the book, Sophie and Michael attempt to catch a falling star on the Porthaven Marshes with the help of the Seven-League Boots. At the end of the book, he tells Howl and Sophie that Calcifer has come back. Near the end of the novel it is revealed that he is in a relationship with Sophie's sister Martha, who is an apprentice at Cesari's, although he believes she is Lettie Hatter. Michael and Martha decide to finish their apprenticeships before marrying.

Wales[]

Lily Angorian is first seen during Sophie Hatter and Michael Fisher's first trip to Wales with Howl Jenkins Pendragon. On the hunt for a lost spell and the second half of a poem-cum-curse, the wizard takes them to the house of his nephew's English teacher. As with many women, Howl falls instantly in love with Miss Angorian, who becomes his next target of courting. However, she responds on the trip by being quite short, and dislikes Howl much based on first impressions and community rumors about the estranged Mr. Jenkins. She returns the spell, while telling Howl the second half of the poem. Learning the full meaning of the Witch of the Waste's curse, he takes Sophie and Michael back to Ingary.

Courting the Teacher[]

However, Howl was not swayed by Miss Angorian's attitude. For some time, he returned over and over to Wales in attempt to woo Miss Angorian, forgetting about his previous target, Lettie Hatter. However, she proved a much more difficult woman to crack than any of his previous attempts. It was nearly midsummer, the day his curse would come true, before she began to succumb to his charm.

Midsummer[]

On Midsummer Day, during a grand reunion in Howl's Castle while Howl slept off his hangover, Miss Angorian arrived through the magic door in Ingary, where she seemed quite out of place amongst the friends and relatives. However, she recognized the guitar of her ex-boyfriend Ben Sullivan resting in the corner of parlor, and refused to leave. She waited for some time in the parlor for Howl to awaken, though finally exited the door through the wrong setting and ended up in The Waste Garden.

Not too long after, Calcifer erupts, calling out to Howl that the Witch had discovered his family in Wales. Howl flew downstairs and through the door to the other world, and the guests of the castle watched through the window of his bedroom as he saved his niece and nephew from her grasp. The Witch however warned him that his new love was next to be taken.

Sophie, realizing that she had left Miss Angorian outside the castle and vulnerable, went to find her. Seeing that she was no longer in the garden, flies across The Waste in Howl's Seven-League Boots to the Witch of the Waste's castle. Howl swiftly follows to rescue her, defeating the Witch quite easily. He flies Sophie back across the Waste, explaining to her on the way that the Witch was not the real threat, but it was instead her Fire Demon, who had by now nearly consumed her, who was his true antagonist. The demon had sealed itself in Ben Sullivan's guitar, and when they returned to the castle, it burst revealing Miss Angorian, the real witch who had cursed Howl in an attempt to steal his heart and combine his body with Wizard Suliman's and Prince Justin's.

She was defeated though, and Miss Angorian vanished in the parlor of Howl's Castle when he snuffed out the Witch's fragile heart.

Trivia[]

She does not appear in the movie, however she is referenced when Madam Suliman drains the Witch of the Waste's powers as she states that the witch "fell prey to a demon of greed, who consumed her body and soul".

While her true name goes unmentioned in the novel, the BBC radio drama adaptation gives it as Pantherma. In that adaptation, Angorian is portrayed by Gwyneth Keyworth.[1]

Appearance[]

Outside[]

The moving castle appears from the outside as a tall, off-balanced, black-brick castle with four square towers, and three doors. However, two of these doors cannot be approached at all, as though there were an invisible barrier blocking the way. Only the third door can be reached, which although is the back door of the castle, is the front door of the house within. The four towers often billow smoke, and the harder Calcifer works, the more smoke is issued. It is apparently made from coal.

Within[]

The inside of the castle is not at all what anyone might expect. In fact, it is not the inside of the castle at all. Upon entering the castle through its magical door, one actually enters into the house in which Calcifer is in. At first, this is the small cottage in Porthaven, though is moved to the hat shop house in Market Chipping. It consists only of a few small rooms on two floors, a parlor with a fireplace, and an entrance to a small yard where Wizard Howl creates many of his magical objects. There are however two windows that are not attached to the Porthaven/Market Chipping house. One is a tiny window above the door that Calcifer uses to see where he is steering the castle, and the other is in Howl's room, which views his sister's backyard in Wales so he can watch his niece and nephew from Ingary.

Appearance in the Movie[]

In the movie, the house and the castle seem to be interchangeable, with some doors and windows opening to the castle, while others open to Porthaven (or after the move, Market Chipping). This could be a reference to the windows in the original novel that opened to places other than Porthaven/Market Chipping. The castle is quite different in the movie, depicted as a hodgepodge of houses, mechanics, and even cannon stations that form a what appears to be a walking mechanical creature with chicken-like legs and a huge, frog-like face. It retains the four smoke towers. Grandma Sophie, upon seeing the castle for the first time in the Wastelands, comments on its ugliness.

The Moving Castle[]

Wizard Howl's Moving Castle[]

As mentioned above, Howl does indeed have a moving castle. Powered and steered by Calcifer, it roams the hillsides around the Chipping Valley, sometimes going as far as to the border of The Waste. How it moves is never precisely described in the books. In the movie, the castle itself is shown to have short, spindly legs that it uses to walk around.

The Magic Door[]

What truly makes Howl's castle a moving castle, however, is its unique front door. There is a small dial near the doorknob, and where the door leads to when opened depends on what color the dial is turned to. This allows the residents to jump many many miles nearly instantly.

Mr Hatter

Title: Mr Hatter

URL: https://howlscastle.fandom.com/wiki/Mr_Hatter

Mr Hatter was the father of Sophie Hatter and her sisters. All that is known about him is that he was so proud of his daughters that he ensured that they were as well-educated as possible,[1] to such an extent that he blew all the family's money on trying to pay their tuition fees.[2] He died suddenly of an unknown cause (likely a heart attack), and, upon his death, Sophie and her sisters were forced to leave school and find apprenticeships, which had been arranged by Fanny Hatter, Mr Hatter's second wife.

She was an apprentice of Mrs. Pentstemmon, and is very fond of honey. She is good friends with Fanny Hatter, and takes on Martha Hatter as a pupil to teach her magic after Mr Hatter's death. Some weeks later she discovers that Martha and her sister Lettie switched places using one of Mrs Fairfax's own honey-based spells. She lets Lettie stay on as a student on the condition that she stay as her real self. Mrs Fairfax soon discovers that Lettie has a real gift for magic; and considers her to be in the same league as the Witch of the Waste, but in a good way. When Wizard Howl comes courting Lettie under the name 'Sylvester Oak', Mrs Fairfax recognizes him immediately, but doesn't let on that she does. She encourages Lettie to let Howl court her, because she sees that Lettie could learn a lot more from Howl than she could from Mrs Fairfax. When a dog comes to the house to stay, Mrs Fairfax sees that it is really a bespelled human. Later, Mrs Fairfax visits Sophie in the moving castle with Lettie, and after the curses on Howl and Wizard Suliman and Prince Justin are broken tells Prince Justin that Sophie is the lady of the house, or will be soon.

Wizard Howl was her last apprentice, who left halfway through his tutelage and never returned to complete it. She is quite old and quite regal, giving off a more royal air than the King of Ingary himself.

At some point, she wrote a book concerning magic, entitled Mrs Pentstemmon's Path: Signposts to the Truth.[1]

She was murdered by the Witch of the Waste when she refused to tell the Witch of Howl's whereabouts.

Early life[]

Peter Regis was born to the Witch of Montalbino and an unknown man, who was killed in an avalanche shortly after his birth.[3] Unbeknownst to Peter at the time, his father was Hans Nicholas, heir to the throne of High Norland, who had emigrated to Montalbino with his mother simply because he had no interest in kingship and wished to indulge his passion for mountaineering.[4]

2.2 Howl's Moving Castle (Movie)

Locales[]

Porthaven[]

Porthaven itself is a poor village by the sea. The inhabitants of Porthaven include the unnamed girl who was given a luck spell for her father's boat to protect him from rough seas by Michael Fisher and the sea captain who wanted a wind spell. Location's include the quay, and Michael Fisher's old house which he was kicked out of because he couldn't pay the rent.

Porthaven Marshes[]

The Porthaven Marshes are where Howl caught a falling star as a child, and where Sophie and Michael later attempted to catch a falling star with the aid of the Seven-League Boots.

Story[]

Howl's Moving Castle (Book)[]

Before the beginning of the book, Michael Fisher was kicked out of his house by his landlord because he couldn't pay the rent. He slept on Howl's doorstep that night. Howl made him his apprentice the next day after he told Michael to wait there. The interior of Howl's Castle is really his house in Porthaven. As mentioned above, Sophie and Michael attempt to catch a falling star on the Porthaven Marshes using the Seven-League Boots. Porthaven is also the location of a duel fought between Howl and the Witch of the Waste, after which he moves Calcifer to the hat shop in Market Chipping in order to escape.

Howl's Moving Castle (Movie)[]

Porthaven is where the army of Ingary set out from and return to after being defeated. The Porthaven Marshes and the garden at the edge of the Waste are merged into Howl's Secret Garden.

Story[]

Howl's Moving Castle (Movie)[]

Simply referred to as "The Prince," he is the prince of a neighboring kingdom to Ingary who was cursed into existing as a turnip-headed scarecrow, with a tendency to get caught upside-down and helpless. The kingdom thought the Prince had been kidnapped by Ingarians, and declared war on them. Though Howl Jenkins Pendragon and the Witch of the Waste can see through the spell, his true identity is only revealed to Sophie Hatter and Markl at the end, when a kiss from Sophie breaks the curse. He appears to have fallen in love with Sophie, though she is in love with Howl. Free of his curse, he returns to his home to help negotiate a truce with Ingary. But understands the heart can change.

Howl's Moving Castle (Book)[]

Some time before the beginning of the story, Prince Justin goes to The Waste to search for Wizard Suliman, who had been creating a garden at its border when he disappeared. The finding spell he buys from Mrs Fairfax brings him to the Chipping Valley, and into Upper Folding, all the way to Howl's Castle. However, the spell begins pointing in two directions, and he gets lost. He buys another finding spell from Michael Fisher, Howl's apprentice, which turns out to be a dud. He buys another finding spell from there, which leads him to the edge of the Waste.

The Witch of the Waste captures him here, and uses parts of his body for her creation, combined with Wizard Suliman. The leftover parts are used to create a servant with little memory who follows her around called Gaston. However, when he disobeys her in the hat shop a few days after May Day, she transforms him into a dog and leaves him tied in the hills outside Market Chipping. He is later freed by a cursed Sophie Hatter on her exodus from Market Chipping, and runs away into the hills to Mrs. Fairfax's house where he remembered stopping by as Prince Justin.

While it is difficult, the dog-man, now named Percival, is able to transform back into a person long enough to ask Lettie Hatter for help. For some time, he stays with Lettie and Mrs. Fairfax, changing every so often back into a person. Every time, he changes back into a different kind of dog, and it is becoming more and more difficult to change, and he can stay a man for less and less time.

Eventually, he is sent to look after Sophie when Lettie learns she is now living with Howl. He asks Sophie not to tell Howl that he is a bespelled man, and becomes part of the family for some time, living with them as they go into hiding from the Witch of the Waste, who has put a curse on Howl.

Because of an imminent war with Strangia, the King of Ingary names Howl as his Royal Wizard to replace Wizard Suliman and orders him to search for Prince Justin, which he had already been doing in his own way since his disappearance.

Howl of course eventually discovers the cursed dog-man, and becomes angry with Sophie for not telling him. Lifting the curse, Percival is now himself again. Though he claims he does not remember much, when he is alone with Sophie, he explains that he worked for a bit with the Witch of the Waste, that he was there the day Sophie was cursed, and that he has been staying with Sophie's sister. However, he still does not remember anything beyond coming into service with the Witch of the Waste as Gaston.

Once the Witch of the Waste and her Fire Demon are destroyed, Howl is able to separate the bits of Prince Justin from Percival and the body the Witch had been creating to recreate him. The Prince returns to the King of Ingary, his brother, to report on what has happened and to help him prepare for the coming war.

Castle in the Air[]

After the war against Strangia has been won, Prince Justin is organizing men to search for Princess Beatrice of Strangia, Justin's intended, who has run away to avoid marrying Prince Justin. A djinn, who is later revealed to be Hasrueel, appears before him, and declares that because Ingary won the war against Strangia because of unfair use of magic, he has kidnapped the Princess Beatrice, and curses Prince Justin, taking away his memories and making him believe he is a Strangian soldier. Prince Justin begins to steal from other men, and often flashes his coins everywhere to get men to attempt to rob him so that he can rob them.

He meets Abdullah's acquaintance at a tavern in Ingary. After Abdullah follows him as he lures two men into trying to rob him, and he and Abdullah manage to win a fight against them, they travel together through the mountains to Kingsbury. In the mountains, the soldier finds a mother cat and her kitten, who he names Midnight and Whippersnapper, and dotes on them and thus they join the soldier and Abdullah on their journey to Kingsbury.

In Kingsbury, Abdullah leaves the soldier in an inn with the genie and the flying carpet. The soldier, tempted by the reward Abdullah has said there will be if Princess Valeria is saved from the djinn, orders the genie to wish him to the Castle in the Air. Unfortunately, Whippersnapper is also transported there, and the soldier is at a loss because Whippersnapper is no longer a kitten but a human baby. In the Castle, the princesses find him and disguise him as the Jharine of Jham. Another princess takes charge of the baby, feeding him milk from a bottle.

When Abdullah and Sophie arrive at the Castle, Sophie yells at the soldier for taking Morgan with him after the djinn. The soldier tries to explain, but Sophie does not want to listen. When Morgan begins to cry, Sophie finally allows him to explain. After the calm is restored, the princesses, Abdullah, Sophie and Jamal the cook begin to plan to overpower the djinns. The soldier threatens to betray them to the djinns and become their guard if he is not given a Princess to marry. Grudgingly, several princesses offer themselves but the soldier chooses Princess Beatrice, much to her astonishment. Beatrice says that she is not pretty, but the soldier says that he would rather have a princess who will stand by him no matter what and who can darn, rather than a beautiful fragile princess.

After the djinns are defeated, the enchantment on Prince Justin is broken, and he remembers who he is. He admits to Beatrice that he is really Prince Justin, but has been under an enchantment. He also realizes that he will have to do something about the Strangian soldiers wandering about Ingary. After the Castle comes back down to Earth, Justin stops all his complaints about having to marry Princess Beatrice, much to his brother's delight. Justin finds out that the King thought he had walked off in a huff after an argument over him having to marry Beatrice and hadn't even begun to worry about him. Because he is so pleased at Justin and Howl's return, the King orders a double wedding for Abdullah and Flower-in-the-Night (the new Ambassadors of Ingary), and Prince Justin and Princess Beatrice.

Later, Justin becomes monarch of Strangia alongside Beatrice, and the two are known as King Justin and Queen Beatrice.

Trivia[]

While never named, it is likely that the "neighboring kingdom" the Prince comes from in the movie is really Strangia, which lies along the border and is at odds with Ingary, eventually going to war with them.

Prince Ludovic

Title: Prince Ludovic

URL: https://howlscastle.fandom.com/wiki/Prince_Ludovic

Prince Ludovic is the Crown Prince of High Norland, and one of the main antagonists of House of Many Ways. Although he is not seen until fairly late in the book, he is reputed to be uncaring and cruel. He is later revealed to have killed almost all of his family to ensure the throne would be his, and to be the spawn of a Lubbock.

Charmain realizes that he is Lubbokkin when she first sees him, as his eyes are purple.

He is the cause of King Adolphus X and Princess Hilda's money vanishing (employing Kobolds to move the gold), and is eventually invited to the King's castle to stay a while. However, Sophie has been left notes warning that if she stays in the castle Morgan will be harmed, and argues with the King in an attempt to leave. After a short space of time Ludovic, The Colourless Man and Morgan's nursemaid reveal themselves to be Lubbockkin, and try to escape with Morgan. After a lot of running around, Ludovic takes Howl captive (in the form of Twinkle) and threatens to hurt him if not crowned king on the spot. Howl reverts to his usual form and punches the prince in the face before helping Calcifer turn Ludovic into a rabbit. Waif then leaps forward and kills the rabbit.

Early life[]

Among the things that are known about her is that she refused marriage with a king, three lords and a wizard.[1]

Castle in the Air[]

Princess Hilda is not named in the book, only referred to as "the elderly princess of High Norland". She is one of the princesses kidnapped by the djinn Hasruel. She plays a minor role, along with the characters from the first book.

House of Many Ways[]

She appears in the book, which is set two years after the second book, again in a minor role. It is mentioned in a letter from the King that she is to forgo her work in the royal library due to the visit by Sophie Hatter, Howl and Morgan. She has a role at the end of the book, where she discovers (along with her father) where the missing money of the Royal Family was.

She appears briefly in Howl's Moving Castle as an infant, but has a much more prominent role in Castle in the Air, where she is one of the princesses kidnapped by the djinn Hasrueel. While she is originally guarded by Wizard Suliman's magic, his spells are weakened when he transforms Midnight back into her human form, allowing Hasrueel to kidnap Valeria. She is critical to the princesses' escape plan, throwing a tantrum to distract the djinn while Abdullah, the soldier, and the princesses overtake him.

Zanzib[]

Zanzib is the city where Abdullah and Jamal used to live. Abdullah's stall is located there, not far from the West Quarter where the rich people live. Apparently, the appropriate demonym for them is Zanzibbey.[1]

People[]

The Rashpuhti are an extremely polite and proper people. Their dealings, particularly business dealings, tend to consist of ever growing back-and-forth flattery, and they are generally shocked when someone speaks to them directly. They believe heavily in prophecy and mythology (not surprising, given that these mythological creatures do indeed exist). They encourage polygyny (the marriage of one man to multiple wives), though prohibit polyandry (the marriage of one woman to multiple husbands).

Rashpuhti cuisine is world-renowned for its bizarre foods and acquired taste. Its most well-known dish is fried squid, and many say that Jamal is the best Rashpuhti squid cook.

Influence[]

The Sultanates of Rashpuht are very obviously based upon Middle Eastern culture.

Res Magica is a magical encyclopedia, a distinctive set of which is owned by William Norland. Soon after Peter Regis arrived at Norland's House, he studied these books from cover-to-cover and in order, although he notably struggled to read volume five, failing to understand the contents of it.[1] He recommended that Charmain Baker study it, and from the book they discovered the concepts of Lubbocks and lubbockin.

The encyclopedia contained at least twenty-eight volumes, including the following:

While the Mansion itself is not described in detail, the interior of the mansion is described as rather humble, with no fancy decorations anywhere to be seen, no doubt affected by the royals' poverty.[1] The Mansion is also described as having a large front door, with a door knocker which is apparently famous for bearing a door knocker which is enchanted to bear the appearance of it being constructed entirely of gold when it is not the case in reality.[2] It is also mentioned as having golden tiles upon its roof.

It seems other countries, or at least High Norland also have their own Royal Wizards, who keep in contact with one another; however the king of one country cannot call upon the aid of a Royal Wizard of another country. This is seen in House of Many Ways where Howl disguises himself as a small child named "Twinkle" in order to help Sophie who was called by the King of High Norland to find the missing treasury because the King could not call on Howl's help directly.

Story[]

Upon moving the castle, one of the doors opens now to Howl's Secret Garden, a surprise present Howl planned for Sophie Hatter. While he shows her, he explains that the cottage there was once his uncle's, who gave it to him when he was young to practice magic in. He often practiced in the garden, helping the flowers grow with his magic. Howl's secret garden

One day, there was a meteor shower, when falling stars rained down all over the garden, most either dying in the wetlands or drowning in the lake. Howl, having studied them, knew that if he could catch one, he could trade its heart for some of its power, and allow it to stay alive. It was that night that he caught Calcifer, who became his personal Fire Demon.

Sophie, who had used the magical door to travel back in time to that date, called out to Howl, telling him to find her in his own future so that she could break their contract and free Howl from his fate of becoming a monster. The magic door which leads Sophie & Heen to Howl's past

Back in the present day, a battleship on its way to war flew over the garden while Howl and Sophie were exploring it. Using his magic, Howl disabled its weapons and caused it to sink dangerously close to the ground. In response, Madame Suliman's henchmen were dispatched to fly after them. Howl transformed halfway into his bird monster and flew Sophie back through the door into the castle, leaving to take on the henchmen on his own.

For several days, the garden was used for flowers for the flower shop they opened in Sophie's old hat shop.

Sophie Hatter (ソフィ ハッター , Sof Hatt) is the female protagonist and heroine of the first book in the Castle Series, Howl's Moving Castle, and of the movie Howl's Moving Castle.

Sophie is a young woman living in the small town of Market Chipping in the kingdom of Ingary, and she is the eldest of three sisters. In the land of Ingary, this, of course, means that Sophie is destined to never find her fortune and live a dull life at home. She works in her late father's hat shop as her stepmother, Fanny Hatter's, apprentice whilst her other sisters are off pursuing other careers.

Physical Appearance[]

Howl's Moving Castle book[]

Eldest of the Hatter sisters, Sophie, age 18, has red-gold hair and blue-green eyes. She is considered to be rather pretty, although she doesn't perceive herself as such. She primarily wears the color grey, but this changes as her confidences grows.

Howl's Moving Castle movie[]

Sophie's appearance in the movie depicts her as a young, innocent-looking girl with brown eyes and long brown hair worn in a plait that is tied with pink ribbons. Before she is cursed, she is seen wearing a sun hat with a red ribbon and a pink brochette, and a cadet blue dress with a white collar and three buttons on the chest, all of which contribute to her plain appearance.

After Sophie is cursed, she retains her same hat and continues wearing her hair in the same fashion. She changes her dress to one in the same style but pastel blue in color. However, she gains a significant amount of weight, and obtains both a wrinkled appearance and silver hair from age.

When the curse is lifted, Sophie retains the silver hair that she acquired from the curse and it is now styled in a short bob after being cut off during previous events. She returns back to her former, younger self.

Personality[]

Although Sophie is initially reserved and lacking confidence, she demonstrates herself to be a strong-willed individual after she is cursed into becoming an old woman, becoming less afraid of what others think of her. Dutiful, kind, and considerate, Sophie also has a tendency to be impulsive in her actions and often feels guilty when she does something wrong, though her attempts to rectify matters are usually disastrous. She is a very compassionate individual and often tries to help others, no matter who they are, going so far as taking the Witch of the Waste under her protection. It is eventually revealed that Sophie possesses magical abilities of her own - she is capable of talking life into objects, though she initially is unaware of her powers and uses them unwittingly. When developed, they become very powerful.

Story[]

Howl's Moving Castle book[]

In the book, Howl's Moving Castle, Sophie is the eldest of three daughters of hat maker, Mr. Hatter, in the magical kingdom of Ingary, where many fairy-tale tropes are accepted ways of life. When Sophie's father dies, her step-mother, Fanny Hatter sets her to making hats in the family hat shop. She turns out to spend all the money while Sophie makes the hats.

Sophie's magical talents attract the attention of the Witch of the Waste. Mistaking Sophie for her sister, Lettie Hatter, and believing that Sophie was withholding some information she needed regarding Howl, the Witch of the Waste curses Sophie into becoming an old woman. With a desire to lift the curse, Sophie travels to the moving castle owned by the Wizard Howl, despite the rumors that Howl is renowned for stealing the souls of beautiful girls.

While in the castle, Sophie meets Calcifer, a fire demon, and learns of the contract that keeps him locked inside Howl's Castle. The fire demon promises to break Sophie's curse if she agrees to free him from the contract with Howl. Calcifer often tries to drop hints to Sophie of how to break their contract, but she typically misses the hints, being so nosey with Howl.

After the King of Ingary appoints Howl to a mission in search of his brother, Prince Justin, Howl, being a coward, attempts to use Sophie as a scapegoat and pleads with her to petition against his appointment. Howl happens to have his own reasons in avoiding the appointment, notably due to the Witch of the Waste and her being one of his many ex-lovers. Sophie soon learns that Howl is not a wicked wizard who steals the heart of young girls, but rather a young man who takes great pleasure in breaking the hearts of young girls. Despite this, Sophie ends up falling in love with him, albeit she is too stubborn to admit this.

Howl tries to avoid falling in love with Sophie because, if he falls in love, then he must return to the Witch of the Waste. However, Howl cannot help but follow his heart, falls in love with Sophie, and activates his curse. One the day the curse is said to come true, the Witch of the Waste informs Sophie that she has kidnapped Miss Angorian, a schoolteacher whom Howl has been courting. Believing that it is Miss Angorian who Howl truly loves, Sophie returns to the Waste and attempts to save her before Howl finds out.

When Sophie gets to the Waste, the Witch reveals that the scheme was all a trick to lure Sophie to the Waste. Proven successful, the Witch of the Waste captures Sophie, prompting Howl to return to the Waste to save her. Howl fights the Witch of the Waste, overcoming his own reluctance to do so out of his love for Sophie. However, the Witch of the Waste's own fire demon, Miss Angorian, attempts to steal Howl's heart as the Witch's heart was too old and weak. Sophie manages to break the contract between Calcifer and Howl, and returns Howl's heart to him. Sophie defeats Miss Angorian, breaking her own curse, and freeing both Wizard Suliman and Prince Justin, who have been merged together by the Witch.

After the preceding events end, Howl and Sophie admit their feelings for one another and agree to live together.

Howl's Moving Castle movie[]

Howl and Sophie on the sky walking and flying

In the movie, Howl's Moving Castle, Sophie is the eldest of two sisters, and the daughter of an unnamed hat maker. The store is managed by her mother, Honey Hatter, of whom Sophie is a hat-making apprentice to.

On her way to visit her sister, Lettie Hatter, Sophie is stopped by two soldiers trying to flirt with her. A mysterious man intervenes the encounter, prompting the soldiers to leave. The man informs Sophie that he is being followed as some blob-like henchmen belonging to the Witch of the Waste appear. Using his magic, the man enchants himself and Sophie, allowing them to walk on air and escape the henchmen. He safely delivers Sophie onto the balcony of her sisters bakery where her sister informs her that the man was possibly the soul snatching wizard named Howl. Sophie claims she was never in any danger because she is not beautiful and that Howl only steals the souls of beautiful girls.

Sophie- after being cursed by the Witch of The Waste

Later that evening, the Witch of the Waste breaks into Sophie's hat shop after hours. Unbeknownst to the Witch's identity, Sophie informs her that the shop is closed for the day. The Witch replies with an insult, stating both Sophie and the hat shop are 'tacky', to which Sophie again asks her to leave. The Witch, jealous of the attention Sophie had received from Howl, curses her to become old.

The morning after being cursed by the Witch of the Waste, Sophie leaves behind her life in search of a cure. On her journey, she meets a mysterious creature that she dubs Turnip-Head, who, unlike in the book, is actually helpful to her. Providing her with a walking stick, Turnip-Head leads Sophie to Howl's Castle.

With Turnip-Head's assistance, Sophie manages to get inside the castle where she meets a fire demon named Calcifer. Together, they agree to break each other's curses. Sophie falls asleep only to be awakened by a knock on the door where she meets Markl, an apprentice of Howl. Markl is a very young boy, opposed to his book counterpart Michael Fisher, who is much older. Sophie cooks them all breakfast, and once again meets Howl. Sophie, in an attempt to tell Howl about her curse, realizes that she is unable to speak about it and decides instead to say she is their new cleaning lady that Calcifer hired.

Sophie working as a "cleaning lady"

She takes her job very seriously, cleaning every room in the castle, minus Howl's. While she and Markl are shopping in the market, she sees one of the Witch of the Waste's henchmen. Surprisingly, no one else notices him. She and Markl go back to the castle, where Howl bursts out of his bathroom, his normally blond hair a bright shade of orange. Sophie admits that she reorganized his magic salts. His hair changes colors and settles on black, Howl begins to ooze green slime out of depression and releases dark energy, (which has happened once before, when a girl dumped him). Sophie and Markl clean him up.

The next morning, Howl tells Sophie that he's been summoned to the Royal Palace so he can defend the country in a war. He also tells her that he's a coward and all he does is hide. He then tells Sophie to go to the Palace as his mother to convince Madame Suliman that he's too cowardly to show his face. Sophie goes to Kingsbury, along with a ring that Howl gives her, and on her way to the castle, she meets up with the Witch of the Waste.

From here on, the movie and the book differ greatly.

While they are climbing the steps to the palace, the Witch visibly grows older. When they make it inside, Sophie is led by a dog into a room where Madame Sulliman is. She tells Sophie that Howl has been taken over by a demon, and soon it will completely consume him. The Witch of the Waste loses her powers, and Howl arrives disguised as the King to save Sophie. Before they can get away, Madame Suliman shows Sophie what Howl really is. He transforms into a fierce bird, but before he loses himself, Sophie yells that it's a trap, and he flies Sophie out of the palace, along with the Witch of the Waste, and Sulliman's dog, Heen. Sophie flees the Royal City on a plane that Howl stole. Howl stays behind as a decoy so Sophie can safely get away. Sophie crashes into the castle, and she dreams that Howl is consumed by his demon. She admits that she loves him in her dream, where he roars that it's too late. Howl arrives the next morning, and moves the castle again. The castle transforms into Sophie's hat shop, along with a new portal, that leads to a beautiful field of flowers. Sophie becomes young again, and she asks Howl if he's leaving her. Then after a little discussion, Sophie grows old again, and an enemy warship approaches the field. Howl destroys the engine, and saves Sophie. Sophie turns the Hat Shop into a flower shop, and her mother visits her. Her mother secretly leaves a little spy blob behind, and the Witch throws it in Calcifer's mouth. He weakens, and is unable to defend the castle when the country is thrust into war. Sophie runs outside, fully young as she has unknowingly broke her own curse, and watches as Howl saves the shop from a falling bomb. He emerges from the wreckage unscathed, and the two embrace. Howl heals Calcifer, and Sophie begs him not to go out into the war again. He responds, "Sorry, I've had enough of running away, Sophie. Now I've got something to protect. It's you." He leaves and Sophie moves Calcifer from his hearth, breaking the connection the castle had to Market Chipping. The castle crumbles, and Sophie places him back in the ruined grate. Despite Sophie's curse being lifted, her hair remains silver, much unlike the book, where Sophie's hair turns red. She gives Calcifer her hair, and he grows strong enough to move the castle to find Howl and tell him that they are safe. Meanwhile, the Witch of the Waste realizes that Calcifer holds Howl's heart, and she plucks him from the hearth. She begins to burn, and Sophie throws a bucket of water on her. Calcifer goes out, causing the castle to fall apart. Sophie falls over a cliff, along with Heen. The ring that Howl gave her glows blue, and leads to the portal from the castle. She opens it up, and enters the black void that only Howl has been in. She ends up in the past, and witnesses Howl as a child. Stars are falling from the sky, and she runs out to stop him from making a pact with Calcifer. However, Howl swallows the star before Sophie can reach him, and Calcifer is born, with Howl's small heart beating within. Sophie calls out to him, telling him to find her in the future. She is then thrust back through the door, where Howl is waiting for her. He is unresponsive, but he brings her to the remains of the castle.

Sophie just before she puts Howl's heart back and frees Calcifer

She pleads with the Witch to give her Calcifer, and when she does, Sophie pushes him into Howl's chest. Calcifer flies out, once more a star, and flies away. The remains of the castle break apart once Calcifer leaves, and they shot down a hill towards a cliff, but are saved by Turnip Head, who loses his pole in the process. Sophie kisses

Turnip Head, who turns into the missing prince. He explains that a curse turned him into a scarecrow, and the Witch of the Waste says that "a kiss from your true love breaks it," revealing the prince's affections for Sophie. At that moment, Howl awakes, complaining about a weight on his chest. Sophie then replies, "A heart's a heavy burden." Howl remarks that her silver hair is beautiful. Sophie, now full of confidence, tackles him and agrees. The Witch of the Waste tells the prince, "Looks like your true love is in love with someone else. You should go home anyway and tell your king to stop this dumb war." The prince agrees, then leaves to end the war, promising to return. After the prince leaves, Calcifer returns, deciding to stay with the curse-free Sophie and Howl. The movie ends with the castle flying through the sky. Markl and Heen are seen playing in a small garden with the Witch and Calcifer watching over them. Sophie is last seen with Howl on a balcony, and the two share a kiss as the castle slowly floats away.

Castle in the Air[]

In Castle in the Air, Sophie and Howl are married and Sophie is pregnant with their first child, Morgan. When she is around eight months pregnant, Howl happens to be working on a divination spell for the King of Ingary when he discovers that a djinn plans to steal the Castle for itself. Howl sends Michael and the new apprentice away, but Sophie refuses to leave with them. She and Howl are arguing about that when the djinn comes, and Howl turns Sophie into a cat, and all of a sudden Sophie finds herself alone in the mountains north of Kingsbury. Sophie gives birth to Morgan while she's still a cat (approximately a week after the castle is stolen) so he is born a kitten. They meet the main character, Abdullah, and a Strangian soldier. While the soldier takes a liking to Sophie as a cat and names her Midnight, Abdullah hates her and is scared of her strange powers. Once Abdullah reaches Ingary in his quest to find Flower-in-the-Night, he learns who Sophie really is. Wizard Suliman turns her back into a human. The soldier runs away to the moving castle taking the genie and baby Morgan ;_ with him. Abdullah and Sophie take a magic carpet to the castle and discover that the djinns have kidnapped all the princesses from around the world, including Ingary's Princess Valeria and Flower-in-the-Night. Sophie finds Morgan, who has been looked after by the princesses. With the help of the other princesses, Abdullah, Sophie, Flower-in-the-Night, and the moody Genie, they manage to trick the robbers with the powers of the genie, Sophie's talking powers and Morgan's crying, and take back the castle. Sophie and Morgan are both reunited with Howl who was the Genie and Calcifer who was the magic carpet.

House of Many Ways[]

House of Many Ways takes place three years after Castle in the Air. Sophie is a sorceress who is invited to help in the search for the kingdom's missing treasury, mainly because she is Howl's wife and one kingdom cannot ask the help of another kingdom's Royal Wizard. So while they asked for Sophie instead, Howl chose to come along as well in the disguise of an adorable young boy named "Twinkle", claiming to be Sophie's nephew. In the end Sophie helps solve the crime from the prince, and Howl discovers the location of the mysterious Elfgift.

Abilities[]

Without knowing it at first, Sophie was a witch since throughout history she has demonstrated the power to enchant the things she interacts with and imbue them with magic, a clear example was that if she spoke to a hat saying that it would bring good fortune, the person who bought said hat would have good fortune in their life.

Theories about Sophie's curse[]

Some people argue that the power of love was what broke the curse however that theory does not explain why Sophie's age changes frequently throughout the movie. One theory is that the curse is heavily affected by Sophie's own confidence and emotions. In the beginning, she sounds like a 90-year-old grandmother as her mother put it and she acts as if she gave up on her own life. But as she finds some purpose cleaning the castle, she becomes slightly younger. When she pointed out Howl's good qualities to Sulliman, she was assertive and forward with her own thoughts. This caused her to go back to her own age. Later when she is introduced to Howl's secret flower field she is full of joy and youth but when doubt began to cloud her mind and she denied herself from being pretty, she went back to being an old woman.

There are other cases where what she did affected her age in the movie. When she slept, however, she was back to her normal self. At the end of the movie, Sophie was ready to be assertive and move forward with her life instead of giving up, which was probably what broke the curse.

Another theory says that the curse was weakened and started frequently changing Sophie's age until it could only change Sophie's hair color when the Witch of the Waste lost all of her powers. And stating that when she was seen the first time sleeping, Howl must have known of her curse and wanted to see her true youth, and that the second time was only a dream. It is also possible that the spell weakens if Sophie is not focusing very much on it, whether actively or unconsciously. For example, Sophie was probably not dreaming about being old, so she returned to her proper age in sleep. Another example could be her visit to Sulliman, since she would then be thinking about Howl rather than herself.

In the novels, however, Sophie accidentally uses her own powers to perpetuate her own curse, partly because she prefers being old.

Howl's Moving Castle (Novel)[]

Tensions between Ingary and Strangia are constantly increasing throughout the course of the story. Fearing that war is imminent, the King of Ingary doubles his search for Prince Justin and Wizard Suliman, and decides to make Howl Jenkins Pendragon a Royal Wizard. However, war does not come until after Wizard Suliman has returned, giving Ingary two royal wizards to serve the army.

The War[]

Strangia and Ingary do go to war some time after the events of Howl's Moving Castle. The Strangian soldiers are completely overrun by Ingary, due to Ingary's heavy use of magic against Strangia's ordinary army. A peace treaty was signed, and Ingary's Prince Justin was sent to reside there. He was quickly betrothed to Princess Beatrice, the heir to Strangia's throne, to ally the two kingdoms.

Castle in the Air[]

Soon after her betrothal, Princess Beatrice was kidnapped by the Djinnns, and Prince Justin rushes off to find her.

Howl's Moving Castle (Movie)[]

Strangia may be the "neighboring kingdom" mentioned in the movie that Ingary goes to war with, and the home of the Prince.

Madame Suliman is the main villain in Howl's Moving Castle movie adaptation. She is a combination of Mrs. Pentstemmon and Wizard Sulliman in the book.

Howl's Moving Castle (Movie)[]

Madame Suliman serves as the King's Royal Sorcerer who provides magic for the country's military forces and the King's personal use. She uses her power to hunt down wizards and witches across the kingdom, taking them in as apprentices and turning them into monsters to serve in the army, or stripping them of their power if they refuse.

Madame Suliman in the castle

Madame Suliman has a special liking for Howl as she expresses her regret of Howl not arriving to the palace saying that she had finally found someone that could replace her. She says this to Sophie who is posing as Howl's mother upon his request to avoid going to the palace. Madame Suliman however realises who Sophie truly is, and that she is in love with Howl. Howl arrives at the castle disguised as the King, Madame Suliman recognizes him because of his "eloquent" speech and the real King's appearance.

'Rather a weak disguise, didn't I teach you better?'

Madam Suliman casting the spell to transform Howl

As Howl proceeds to leave, Madame Suliman casts a spell revealing to Sophie what Howl 'really' is, his beast/feathered form. Before the spell is complete and Howl completely transforms, Sophie saves him by calling his name and covering his eyes. Madame Suliman's spell is left incomplete as her magic pink glowing stick hits her hat instead.

Madame Suliman is voiced by Blythe Danner in the English version.

Abilities[]

Madame Suliman has proven to be a very powerful witch since even Howl has a certain respect and care for her, she is able to take away the magic of very powerful wizards and witches such as The Waste Witch, cast powerful illusion and revelation spells just by moving her staff and even make cursed people reveal their cursed forms.

Trivia[]

- Madam Suliman is perhaps the most powerful character in the movie.
- It is revealed that she was the one who banished the Witch to the Waste; in the book, it is the king who does banishes her.
- Ironically, both Madam Pentstemmon and Wizard Suliman, of whom Madam Suliman is combined, were defeated by the Witch of the Waste in the book.

The Sultan of Zanzib is the incumbent ruler of Zanzib, one of the Sultanates of Rashpuht. Some time prior to Abdullah's adventure, he deliberately kept his only daughter, Flower-in-the-Night, isolated to the extent that she would not behold any man other than himself, because he planned to forge a marriage alliance with the countries around Ingary on account of their magical and technological prowess. However, the young carpet merchant, as he explained to him, proved a hindrance to his plans.^[1] Therefore, it was the Sultan's intention to kill him by impalement, and even following Abdullah's rescue of his daughter, he remained ungrateful towards him and still threatened to impale him if he ever returned home.

Zanzib[]

Zanzib is the city where Abdullah and Jamal used to live. Abdullah's stall is located there, not far from the West Quarter where the rich people live. Apparently, the appropriate demonym for them is Zanzibbey.[1]

People[]

The Rashpuhti are an extremely polite and proper people. Their dealings, particularly business dealings, tend to consist of ever growing back-and-forth flattery, and they are generally shocked when someone speaks to them directly. They believe heavily in prophecy and mythology (not surprising, given that these mythological creatures do indeed exist). They encourage polygyny (the marriage of one man to multiple wives), though prohibit polyandry (the marriage of one woman to multiple husbands).

Rashpuhti cuisine is world-renowned for its bizarre foods and acquired taste. Its most well-known dish is fried squid, and many say that Jamal is the best Rashpuhti squid cook.

Influence[]

The Sultanates of Rashpuht are very obviously based upon Middle Eastern culture.

The Boke of Palimpsest

Title: The Boke of Palimpsest

URL: https://howlscastle.fandom.com/wiki/The_Boke_of_Palimpsest

The Boke of Palimpsest is a fictional book introduced in House of Many Ways. It is currently owned by Wizard Norland.

Palimpsests are pieces of writing material (such as parchment) whose original content was erased, so that new content can be written to it. They were common in the Middle Age, due to the elevated price of parchment.

The contents of the book seem to change from time to time, since Peter could not find one of the pages Charmain had previously found. This behaviour aligns well with the concept of palimpsest - If the book was made with one, each page could contain more information than what would be shown at a time.

According to the Witch of Montalbino, the book would give a magic user the ability to control the four elements, although fire would only be granted to the trustworthy. For the book to work, the reader had to be somewhat apt to use magic.[1]

Locales[]

The Waste[]

The Waste itself is a great expanse of barren, arid desert, seemingly of packed clay. Nothing grows here, and there is hardly ever any weather - only hot sun.

The Garden[]

At the borders of the Waste lays a large garden. First started by Wizard Suliman and continued by Wizard Howl, it was created to try to fence in the Witch of the Waste. Sophie Hatter collects fresh flowers here daily for her flower shop when in hiding with Howl.

The Witch's Castle[]

The Witch of the Waste lived in a tall, spindly castle that appeared to be made of sandy clay flower pots stacked one-atop-another. Inside is much larger than it appears outside (in contrast to Howl's moving castle, which is only a small house within, but a large castle outside). However, it is also mostly empty.

In the Movie[]

In the movie, the Waste and the Folding Valley seem to be one in the same, or at least very closely related. The hilly grasslands around the valley and the surrounding mountains seem to be referred to as the Waste quite often in the movie, without any notion of an actual wasteland.

Story[]

Exile[]

Approximately 50 years before the beginning of the novel, the Witch of the Waste, whose name is now seemingly unknown, was banished by the King of Ingary and his Royal Wizards to live out her days in exile in the Waste. Bitter and resentful, she was eventually able to make her way back into the kingdom proper with the death of the king who had exiled her.

Howl's Moving Castle (Book)[]

The Waste is first seen when Sophie is lured there by the Witch of the Waste after receiving a message to rescue Lily Angorian. He travels there using Howl's Seven-League Boots. She arrives at the Witch's castle, where the Witch reveals that it was a trick to get Sophie to come to the Waste which had been successful. Howl flies Sophie across the Waste, revealing that Lily Angorian was the Witch's Fire Demon, which had consumed her and she was his true antagonist.

Howl's Moving Castle (Movie)[]

The Waste is first seen when the Castle is travelling through it. As mentioned above, the Waste in the film is different from the one in the books. Also, the garden at the edge of the Waste is shown to be merged with the Porthaven Marshes as Howl's Secret Garden.

Timminz is a kobold who operates within the vicinity of Norland's House. He is the de facto leader of the local kobold tribe.[1] At some point, he and William Norland came to a disagreement on account of the fact that the kobold took offence to the colour of the flowers within his garden, with the wizard apparently laughing it off when the kobold had the audacity to complain.[2] Following Norland's illness, Timminz then passed on the complaint to Charmain Baker, Norland's niece, who adamantly refused to remove the bushes on account of the fact that her responsibility was to look after the house and leave everything as she had left it. This led all the kobolds to retreat in disgust from the property.[3] After Charmain captured Rollo, another kobold who had worked in collaboration with a lubbock, Timminz, who was repairing a cuckoo-clock at the time, encountered them and interrogated Rollo concerning this partnership, before revealing his own people's collaboration with Prince Ludovic.[4] Following Ludovic's defeat, Timminz volunteered to continue the time-honoured tradition among the kobolds of looking after Norland's home, to Charmain's considerable relief.[5]

Tsapfan is a country somewhere away from Ingary. It is clear that Tsapfan is not its actual name, as it is a mispronunciation by its high princess, who was just a child when she was abducted by Hasrue! on Dalzel's orders.[1] Its actual name is unknown, and it appears, prior to the capture of its princess, that the region was virtually unknown to anyone in the part of the world in which Ingary is located on account of how distant it actually was.[2] Following the release of the princess from the clutches of Dalzel, Abdullah and Flower-in-the-Night travelled to the region on a diplomatic mission, and returned with boxes full of confectionaries from the region.[3]

Behind the scenes[]

Based on its name, and some of its customs, not to mention the geographical distance from Ingary, this country appears to be the equivalent of China, since China was not visited by Europeans before the twentieth century, save for the merchants who travelled up and down the Silk Road.

Early Life[]

Decades before the beginning of the novel, the Witch caught a falling star which became her fire demon. Because of this, the Witch became evil. The relationship between her and her fire demon was parasitic, as the demon was draining her and her magic. Fifty years before the events of Howl's Moving Castle, the current King's father banished the Witch to the Waste, and the Witch bore the current King a grudge for that.

In the movie, Howl states he thought she was beautiful and decided to pursue her. She was really ugly on the inside and he left her. She grew angry and decided to curse him. The book doesn't state anything specifically though.

Howl's Moving Castle (Movie)[]

She is a talented witch who was so beautiful that Howl pursued her, but after finding out that she used magic to keep herself looking young and beautiful, he left her. She is still in love with Howl however, and uses her magical powers and henchmen to try and capture him after seeing him with Sophie. That is why she arrives at night to Sophie's hat shop, and insults her before turning her into a 90 year-old woman. As Sophie leaves her hometown in order to break the curse on her, she reaches Howl's castle. Through Sophie's pocket, the Witch uses ancient sorcery to put a powerful spell on Howl in the form of a note. The scorch marks read:

' Scorchmarks from the Witch's Spell You who swallowed a falling star, oh heartless man, your heart shall soon belong to me.'

Initially the antagonist, the Witch becomes somewhat of a protagonist after Madame Suliman lures her to the castle to drain her of her magical powers, restoring the Witch to her actual appearance and age, and replacing her as the antagonist in the movie. She is voiced by Lauren Bacall in the English dubbed version.

Howl's Moving Castle (Novel)[]

The Witch of the Waste is far more terrifying in the novel as she serves as the antagonist. In her first appearance in the novel, she curses Sophie by turning her into an old woman (she mistakes her for Lettie). Howl has spent the past year hiding from the Witch while trying to find Prince Justin and Wizard Suliman. Near the end of the novel, Howl kills the Witch when arriving at the Waste to rescue Sophie.

Abilities[]

The Witch of the Waste was a very powerful and feared witch with a vast arsenal of magical abilities. She was formerly a good witch, just until she made a pact with a fire demon. The relationship between her and the demon became parasitic, eventually draining her and her magic. Even though the demon had been doing so for many years she was still capable of casting curses. The catch was that she just couldn't reverse any curses placed.

She cursed Sophie out of jealousy towards Howl's interest in her. She turned Sophie into a 90 year old woman and is capable of some form of telekinesis, as seen when she opened the locked door to Sophie's hat store. Due to the progression backwards in her moral compass, Madame Suliman lured the Witch of the Waste to drain her magical powers. Doing so returned the witch to her true appearance and rendered her powerless.

History[]

Early Life (Novel)[]

Howl as a child

In the novel, Howl was born as Howell Jenkins to an ordinary family in modern-day Wales. However, he himself was anything but ordinary. Gifted with a natural talent for magic, he began studying it. Even in college, he wrote his thesis on magical spells and charms, and joined a group of other gifted magicians on Earth.

In Wales, Howl had a habit of going out with girls and then jilting them. In an attempt to hide from three angry rugby players whose sister he had jilted, he cast a spell that opened a portal to another land, Ingary, where he moved almost permanently. Still young, he took up tutelage under Mrs. Pentstemmon (or Madame Suliman in the movie). He became her last pupil, and one of her favorites (and best). His natural gift for magic showed, and he was quite powerful. He was in the same league as the Witch of the Waste. Howl is a wizard in the land of Ingary and he has several names; he is known as Wizard Howl in Market Chipping, "Wizard Pendragon" in the capital Kingsbury, and "Jenkins the Sorcerer" in lower-class Porthaven.

One night on the Porthaven Marshes, Howl caught a Falling Star named Calcifer and made a contract with him. He gave his heart to the creature, binding them together, and allowing Calcifer to live for he felt sorry for him, while boosting his own magical power. After doing so, Howl quit his apprenticeship and became a hermit. He dyed his hair and spent all his money on make-up and clothing, and spent his days wooing young ladies until they fell in love with him, and then jilted them. During this time, Howl found Michael Fisher sleeping on his doorstep, and invited him in. Howl was impressed by Calcifer's reaction to Michael. Though he never explicitly told Michael he could stay, Howl allowed him to live in the castle, eventually making him his apprentice. Also during this time, Howl courted and then dumped the Witch of the Waste, who put a curse on him.

Howl occasionally did work for the King's army, but avoided contact with them as much as possible.

Early Life (Movie)[]

In the film he is implied to be a native of Ingary, as multiple elements contradict his backstory in the novel:

He is shown as a child when he first encountered Calcifer and made the contract with him (Howl was already an adult when he arrived in Ingary in the novel).

Howl mentions that his cottage in the Garden used to belong to his uncle.

The black quarter of the dial on the revolving door has a different destination.

Other differences include his apprenticeship to Madame Suliman instead of Mrs. Pentstemmon, with Madame Suliman being the film version's Royal Wizard of Ingary.

The film is also more ambiguous regarding his Howl's romantic pursuits, as he had dated the Witch of the Waste, the people in town do gossip about Howl's tendency to chase after women, and he had at least one other romantic relationship (as Markl mention Howl summoning spirits of darkness when a girl broke up with him).

Howl's Moving Castle[]

Howl's Moving Castle (Novel)[]

It is during one of his outings to find a young woman that he first meets Sophie. Howl first meets Sophie on May Day in Market Chipping before the Witch of The Waste casts an aging spell on her. Days later he returns to the Castle and is surprised to find an old woman cooking bacon on Calcifer. Despite Michael and Calcifer's complaints, he allows Sophie to clean the castle, though he stops her from cleaning his room. Although he has been gathering clues about Suliman's disappearance, Howl is concerned the King wants him to find Prince Justin. He gets Sophie to pretend to be his mother and say bad things about him to the king, but the king is more impressed than annoyed, and hires him as Royal Wizard anyway. The very same day, Mrs Pentstemmon is killed by the Witch of the Waste. Howl is grieved and vows to attend Mrs Pentstemmon's funeral no matter what.

Howl battles with the Witch of the Waste after attending Mrs Penstemmon's funeral. Now that the Witch knows he lives in Porthaven, he decides to move the castle to escape. Taking Michael and Sophie's wishes into consideration, he takes the hat shop in Market Chipping so Michael stays close to Martha (his love interest), and orders Calcifer to find a nice house with lots of flowers for Sophie. Howl helps in the shop and discovers that a dog that stowed away with them is secretly a bespelled human. When Sophie admits that she knew about it he is furious with her. He restores the bespelled human to his human form and suspects he is made of Wizard Suliman and Prince Justin's body parts. Howl is stunned and terrified at this realization; he was counting on Wizard Suliman being alive.

On the night before Midsummer's Day, Howl goes to Wales for a Rugby League Reunion and gets himself drunk out of fear. He uses Sophie to get information out of him, which Sophie is later furious about. On Midsummer's Day, Howl arranges for Sophie's family to visit, to keep Sophie out of trouble. When Sophie falls into the Witch's trap, he goes into the Waste to rescue her. There, he finds the Witch and the scarecrow battling, and Howl kills the Witch. After hearing that the Witch's fire-demon has entered the Castle and touched his guitar, Howl raises a wind to bring himself and Sophie back to the Castle quickly to apprehend the demon. On the way, he finally explains his motives to Sophie.

His honesty seals his fate and in the Castle the Witch's fire demon, in the shape of Howl's nephew's English teacher, gets hold of Calcifer and squeezes the heart Howl had given Calcifer to keep him alive. Howl collapses but Sophie saves him by giving him his heart back. After breaking Howl's and Calcifer's contract, Calcifer breaks the spell on Sophie and Sophie returns to her true age. Howl destroys the Witch's fire demon, which restores Suliman and Prince Justin to their true forms, and asks Sophie to marry him.

Howl's Moving Castle (Movie)[]

The movie adaptation by Hayao Miyazaki has significant differences to the novel, the first being that the story takes place during a war which heavily influences the plot direction, even though the main focus is Sophie and her adventure. Sophie meets Howl for the first time when he rescues her from soldiers who are harassing her by calling her 'Sweetheart' and apologizing for being late and saying he was looking 'everywhere' for her. He further casts a spell on them which forces them to march off. Howl then escorts Sophie to her younger sister Lettie's bakery, being followed by The Witch of the Waste's henchmen, he flies into the air, landing on the roof of the bakery.

When Sophie arrives at the castle, he seems to like her presence and allows her to clean so long as she "doesn't get carried away". All the while, he is routinely going out and fighting in the war using his magical powers for flight. Much to Calcifer's dismay as he believes that eventually Howl may not be able to change back.

After a particularly stressful night of battling his fellow sorcerers on the front lines of battle (using his flying abilities of course), Howl decides to take a bath the next morning. Unfortunately, Sophie rearranged his hair care potions which caused his normally blonde hair to turn ginger. Howl is furious at Sophie for this and throws a tantrum, resulting in his hair reverting back to its original appearance (that being a ravens black hue), He also calls upon the "Spirits of Darkness" as well as himself in a thick green slime that nearly snuffs out Calcifer and necessitates Sophie to redo the mopping. Howl (while recuperating from his tantrum in his bed), explains to Sophie about his current predicaments. Being a coward, having the Witch of the waste constantly trying to pursue him after he jilted her, and having to go to the king as both Wizard Pendragon and Jenkins. (Those both being his aliases). Sophie sighs unsurprised at the mention of Howl jilting the Witch of the waste and says that he should go and "give him (the king) a piece of his mind." Howl is surprised at first and looks confused but then slumps back onto his pillow musing that it would be pointless as the king does not work like that and he has to attend the meeting as he made an oath.

Then, quite suddenly, an idea flashes into Howl. He believes Sophie (being quite old due to the Witch of the wastes spell) could fool Madame Suliman into think that she is Pendragon's mother and that her son is such a coward he made her go in his place. Sophie (unsure who this Madame Suliman individual even is) begrudgingly agrees and so Howl sends her off, but not before telling her that he will follow close behind in disguise to make sure she's safe. He also gives her a ring that "will guarantee her safe return".

Howl sends her off and disguises as the king himself which temporarily fools Suliman. Unfortunately this plan is short lived as the real king walks in completely foiling the plan and forcing Howl to withstand a barrage of Suliman's magical attacks. One of which almost gets the better of him, however Sophie saves him just in time and together they escape in a flying machine.

While escaping in the flying machine, they are followed by some of Suliman's goons. That and Suliman's personal errand dog Heen and the now elderly Witch of the waste tag along too in Howl and Sophie's motor copter. Howl comments on this and how he didn't expect visitors to which Sophie quips back about how he didn't want to go. He explains that he finds Suliman very stern and frightening and that he needed Sophie to go ahead to test the waters as it were. He then, in a very grateful tone, thanks Sophie for saving him during Suliman's attacks. He then shows her how to engage a kind of gps tracker in the ring he gave her allowing her to go directly the castle while he creates a clone of the plane and leads the goons away.

In Sophie's dream, Howl returns to the castle late at night in his demon form much to the concern of Calcifer who believes he has gone too far and will soon be unable to change back. Sophie hears this, gets up from her bed and goes to Howl's room to investigate. Howl is unfazed and uncaring to Sophie's pleas for him to stop fighting and that she doesn't care if he is a demon. In fact, he flies off midway through Sophie's pleas, much to the latter's dismay.

The next day however, Howl seems far more jovial, laughing (good spiritedly) at Sophie for flying into the castles open mouth and saying to Calcifer: "I knew she'd make a good pilot." That day, he expands the house for their seemingly never ending family which now includes Turnip head, a scarecrow that Howl mentions has a nasty curse placed upon him.

Howl takes Sophie into his private flower garden, shows her where he did his wizard apprenticeship under his uncle and says that she start a flower shop with the readily abundant flowers which causes Sophie to become worried. She explains she doesn't want him to leave and says that she loves him even though she is not particularly beautiful. Howl staunchly refutes this statement and says that she in is fact beautiful and even if she is old he loves her deeply. This tender moment is broken however when a war zeppelin flies overhead causing Howl to curse them out as murderers and with a wave of his hand he detonates the bombs carried in the zeppelin causing it to be damaged but not to crash. Some demonic wizards transformed as large winged insects try and attack him and Sophie but he simply sprouts wings and drops Sophie back through the door into the castle and goes off to fight the attackers.

The next time Howl is seen onscreen is when he saves Sophie from an incoming bomb by riding on top of it and leading it away from her. It still blows up in the hat shop courtyard just meters away from Sophie and at first it seems Howl was injured or perhaps killed but miraculously he is unharmed. He and Sophie make it into the hat shop and away from the blob men patrolling the outside and Howl resuscitates Calcifer and just as quickly as he appeared he goes back out onto the front lines saying to Sophie that he doesn't want to run away anymore and that he wants to fight for their family.

Following the failed rescue attempt by Sophie and the near death of Calcifer (very nearly causing the death of Howl, as Calcifer was the vessel of Howl's heart) Sophie sees Howl's younger self when he first met Calcifer. Sophie is brought back to the present day and see that Howl has waited there patiently for her. He is still in his demon form but his human face is visible. Unfortunately he is completely unresponsive and his face is a ghostly pallor suggesting that he is clinging to what little life he has left. Fortunately, he has just enough strength to fly Sophie and Heen back to the castle. Although castle is perhaps over exaggerating as it now, with Calcifer in such a weakened state, has been reduced to a crumbling amalgamation of plywood and dutifully moving metal legs leading it very slowly to an unknown location.

Howl lands (or more accurately collapses) onto the moving structure, disperses his feathers and returns to his human self albeit still unconscious. In fact he looks so far gone Markl asks Sophie if he has died. Sophie says in a disheartened tone that he has not and after persuading the Witch of the Waste to give her Calcifer, she infuses Howl's heart back into him, freeing Calcifer and reviving Howl.

After Turnip head's true identity is revealed after Sophie breaks the spell on him, and Calcifer decides to rejoin their family, all is well. The war is over, Suliman is no longer a threat (and actually her dog Heen has decided to live with Howl and company from now on), Howl is his true human self once again, and Sophie and Howl's relationship has reached its pinnacle. The castle, repaired and restored, flies through the sunny sky, drifting amongst the clouds, while all of its occupants live their happy lives, content for the adventure to come. The end credits play and the film ends.

Castle in the Air (Novel)[]

It is a year later, and Sophie and Howl have married, and are expecting a child. While working on a divining spell for the King, Howl discovers that a djinn is going to steal the moving castle. He sends Michael and the new apprentice away, and wants to send Sophie away as well but she refuses to go. They argue about that, and while they are arguing the djinn arrives. Howl turns Sophie into a cat, and she is thrown out of the Castle. He tells Calcifer to save himself because the djinn is too strong for either of them. Howl is still in the Castle when the djinn comes, and Howl is turned into a genie by the djinn.

Howl is cursed so that he is unable to tell anyone that he is under a spell and no one is able to recognise him. Both Howl and Calcifer at some point find themselves in the hands of Abdullah, a carpet merchant, who has also lost his true love to the djinns. Howl is forced to grant a wish each day to Abdullah, although Howl uses his powers to cause as much trouble for Abdullah as possible. He later encounters the cat Sophie, who is named Midnight by Abdullah's companion the soldier, and finds that she has given birth to Morgan, who is a kitten. When Morgan is turned back into a baby, the Genie takes him to the castle in the air so he can keep an eye on him. Once the djinns are defeated, the Genie is turned back into Howl and he is reunited with Sophie, Morgan and Calcifer.

Appearance and Personality[]

Howl with blonde hair

In the movie adaptation, Howl has shoulder-length straight flaxen blonde hair, light blue eyes, and a pale complexion. He is tall and slender. Later on in the movie, Sophie Hatter cleans his bathroom and switches some hair potions, leaving Howl's formerly blonde hair a ginger color, which later turns a raven black colour. Howl is not very happy with this, and reacts by calling the shadows of darkness and covering himself with a see-through green slime in a particularly humorous scene. Though it is not entirely certain, Howl seems to cut his hair to a chin length bob hair cut after the meeting with Madame Sulliman although the length has changed so little it is difficult to say.

In the book of Howl's Moving Castle, Howl has "marble like" green eyes and it is unclear what his natural hair colour is. According to Calcifer, Howl is "very vain, for a plain looking man with mud-colored hair."

He uses charms and make up to make himself more attractive, as well as having a naturally engaging personality. Michael and Calcifer insist that the day Howl forgets to spend less than an hour in the bathroom is the day he is truly in love, a prediction which later turns out to be true. Howl wears flamboyant and fancy suits, claiming to Michael that "No one's going to employ a wizard if he looks like he can't make money at the trade" (although Sophie voices suspicions that really, he just likes clothes). The suit he wears most often is silver and blue though he later changes to his more favoured grey and scarlet one, later disguised as a black suit, when Howl goes into mourning for his tutor, Mrs Pentstemmon. Originally, it was just flashy, until Sophie accidentally darned magic into the seams by talking life into it, saying "[the suit is] built to pull in the girls."

Howl with black hair

Howl's hair is dyed occasionally, as he doesn't see why "people put so much value in things being natural". At the beginning of the book it is blonde, then a pinkish red color (this happened by accident, Sophie moved around his potions in the bathroom) and finally bluish-black, a color most people agree looks best on him, as it goes with his "glass green eyes". When Howl gets his heart back, his eyes become much less marble-like and more real looking.

Howl has a kind, generous personality. He allowed Michael and Sophie to live with him, and is very forgiving of their mistakes. He also gave Calcifer his heart when Calcifer was a dying falling star. His good traits, however, are masked by his more negative traits, as well as deliberate "blackening of his name", so very few people know of them. He hates to quarrel, and will "slither out" of situations he doesn't want to be in. He hates to be pinned down to anything, and is quite cowardly.

In addition to this, Howl has a somewhat child-like attitude, begging for attention and even throwing a tantrum. Despite his attention-seeking, self-absorbed nature, he's quite kind - or rather, is not wicked; "I'm too patient and too polite," as he put it.

The only way he can make himself do something brave is to tell himself he is running away. He also lies a lot, and likes to tease Sophie, though subtly. A good example of this is when he is pretending to be in love with Lettie to get information on Sophie, and he constantly goes on about her to make Sophie feel jealous. Howl's worst, or at least most troublesome trait, is his courting. He cannot rest until he has made a girl love him and becomes quite insensible, but once she loves him he swiftly forgets her.

This practice is where Howl got his reputation for eating hearts, as that is what rejected girls' angry aunts call it when they come looking for Howl. This practice also is why the Witch of the Waste cursed Howl, as she was jilted by him as well. Howl is very insensible with money, overcharging the rich and undercharging the poor, as well as spending too much too often. It is suspected that, when Howl gave Calcifer his heart, he lost some of his humanity. This is suggested by the progression of the Witch of the Waste, who had her fire demon for much longer than Howl. It is also suggested by Madam Pentstemmon, when she tells Sophie that Howl is "going to the bad."

Abilities[]

Howl's arm after using it for magic

Howl is a very talented wizard, and is also quite good at slithering out of things he does not wish to do - a talent he cultivated through his sister's unwitting aid - and can change into different animals (he's seen as a cat, a dog and an unidentified monster). In the movie, he is able to transform in to a large beast with black feathers and seemly various stages of transformation. He uses this power to fly to the battlefield and fight as well as to escape from enemies.

At one point in the movie, he 'zooms in', on a battleship when him and Sophie are in his garden, he passes walkways, slips past several henchmen, and goes to the heart of the airship where he unplugs several cables that stop all but one wing from working. But this magic seems to transform him into the beast:

Sophie: What did you do?

Howl: Just messed with it, it won't crash though.

Sophie sees that his finger nails have elongated into claws, and his forearm is starting to grow black feathers.

History[]

Early Life (Novel)[]

Howl as a child

In the novel, Howl was born as Howell Jenkins to an ordinary family in modern-day Wales. However, he himself was anything but ordinary. Gifted with a natural talent for magic, he began studying it. Even in college, he wrote his thesis on magical spells and charms, and joined a group of other gifted magicians on Earth.

In Wales, Howl had a habit of going out with girls and then jilting them. In an attempt to hide from three angry rugby players whose sister he had jilted, he cast a spell that opened a portal to another land, Ingary, where he moved almost permanently. Still young, he took up tutelage under Mrs. Pentstemmon (or Madame Suliman in the movie). He became her last pupil, and one of her favorites (and best). His natural gift for magic showed, and he was quite powerful. He was in the same league as the Witch of the Waste. Howl is a wizard in the land of Ingary and he has several names; he is known as Wizard Howl in Market Chipping, "Wizard Pendragon" in the capital Kingsbury, and "Jenkins the Sorcerer" in lower-class Porthaven.

One night on the Porthaven Marshes, Howl caught a Falling Star named Calcifer and made a contract with him. He gave his heart to the creature, binding them together, and allowing Calcifer to live for he felt sorry for him, while boosting his own magical power. After doing so, Howl quit his apprenticeship and became a hermit. He dyed his hair and spent all his money on make-up and clothing, and spent his days wooing young ladies until they fell in love with him, and then jilted them. During this time, Howl found Michael Fisher sleeping on his doorstep, and invited him in. Howl was impressed by Calcifer's reaction to Michael. Though he never explicitly told Michael he could stay, Howl allowed him to live in the castle, eventually making him his apprentice. Also during this time, Howl courted and then dumped the Witch of the Waste, who put a curse on him.

Howl occasionally did work for the King's army, but avoided contact with them as much as possible.

Early Life (Movie)[]

In the film he is implied to be a native of Ingary, as multiple elements contradict his backstory in the novel:

He is shown as a child when he first encountered Calcifer and made the contract with him (Howl was already an adult when he arrived in Ingary in the novel).

Howl mentions that his cottage in the Garden used to belong to his uncle.

The black quarter of the dial on the revolving door has a different destination.

Other differences include his apprenticeship to Madame Suliman instead of Mrs. Pentstemmon, with Madame Suliman being the film version's Royal Wizard of Ingary.

The film is also more ambiguous regarding his Howl's romantic pursuits, as he had dated the Witch of the Waste, the people in town do gossip about Howl's tendency to chase after women, and he had at least one other romantic relationship (as Markl mention Howl summoning spirits of darkness when a girl broke up with him).

Howl's Moving Castle[]

Howl's Moving Castle (Novel)[]

It is during one of his outings to find a young woman that he first meets Sophie. Howl first meets Sophie on May Day in Market Chipping before the Witch of The Waste casts an aging spell on her. Days later he returns to the Castle and is surprised to find an old woman cooking bacon on Calcifer. Despite Michael and Calcifer's complaints, he allows Sophie to clean the castle, though he stops her from cleaning his room. Although he has been gathering clues about Suliman's disappearance, Howl is concerned the King wants him to find Prince Justin. He gets Sophie to pretend to be his mother and say bad things about him to the king, but the king is more impressed than annoyed, and hires him as Royal Wizard anyway. The very same day, Mrs Pentstemmon is killed by the Witch of the Waste. Howl is grieved and vows to attend Mrs Pentstemmon's funeral no matter what.

Howl battles with the Witch of the Waste after attending Mrs Penstemmon's funeral. Now that the Witch knows he lives in Porthaven, he decides to move the castle to escape. Taking Michael and Sophie's wishes into consideration, he takes the hat shop in Market Chipping so Michael stays close to Martha (his love interest), and orders Calcifer to find a nice house with lots of flowers for Sophie. Howl helps in the shop and discovers that a dog that stowed away with them is secretly a bespelled human. When Sophie admits that she knew about it he is furious with her. He restores the bespelled human to his human form and suspects he is made of Wizard Suliman and Prince Justin's body parts. Howl is stunned and terrified at this realization; he was counting on Wizard Suliman being alive.

On the night before Midsummer's Day, Howl goes to Wales for a Rugby League Reunion and gets himself drunk out of fear. He uses Sophie to get information out of him, which Sophie is later furious about. On Midsummer's Day, Howl arranges for Sophie's family to visit, to keep Sophie out of trouble. When Sophie falls into the Witch's trap, he goes into the Waste to rescue her. There, he finds the Witch and the scarecrow battling, and Howl kills the Witch. After hearing that the Witch's fire-demon has entered the Castle and touched his guitar, Howl raises a wind to bring himself and Sophie back to the Castle quickly to apprehend the demon. On the way, he finally explains his motives to Sophie.

His honesty seals his fate and in the Castle the Witch's fire demon, in the shape of Howl's nephew's English teacher, gets hold of Calcifer and squeezes the heart Howl had given Calcifer to keep him alive. Howl collapses but Sophie saves him by giving him his heart back. After breaking Howl's and Calcifer's contract, Calcifer breaks the spell on Sophie and Sophie returns to her true age. Howl destroys the Witch's fire demon, which restores Suliman and Prince Justin to their true forms, and asks Sophie to marry him.

Howl's Moving Castle (Movie)[[\]](#)

The movie adaptation by Hayao Miyazaki has significant differences to the novel, the first being that the story takes place during a war which heavily influences the plot direction, even though the main focus is Sophie and her adventure. Sophie meets Howl for the first time when he rescues her from soldiers who are harassing her by calling her 'Sweetheart' and apologizing for being late and saying he was looking 'everywhere' for her. He further casts a spell on them which forces them to march off. Howl then escorts Sophie to her younger sister Lettie's bakery, being followed by The Witch of the Waste's henchmen, he flies into the air, landing on the roof of the bakery.

When Sophie arrives at the castle, he seems to like her presence and allows her to clean so long as she "doesn't get carried away". All the while, he is routinely going out and fighting in the war using his magical powers for flight. Much to Calcifer's dismay as he believes that eventually Howl may not be able to change back.

After a particularly stressful night of battling his fellow sorcerers on the front lines of battle (using his flying abilities of course), Howl decides to take a bath the next morning. Unfortunately, Sophie rearranged his hair care potions which caused his normally blonde hair to turn ginger. Howl is furious at Sophie for this and throws a tantrum, resulting in his hair reverting back to its original appearance (that being a ravens black hue), He also calls upon the "Spirits of Darkness" as well as himself in a thick green slime that nearly snuffs out Calcifer and necessitates Sophie to redo the mopping. Howl (while recuperating from his tantrum in his bed), explains to Sophie about his current predicaments. Being a coward, having the Witch of the waste constantly trying to pursue him after he jilted her, and having to go to the king as both Wizard Pendragon and Jenkins. (Those both being his aliases). Sophie sighs unsurprised at the mention of Howl jilting the Witch of the waste and says that he should go and "give him (the king) a piece of his mind." Howl is surprised at first and looks confused but then slumps back onto his pillow musing that it would be pointless as the king does not work like that and he has to attend the meeting as he made an oath.

Then, quite suddenly, an idea flashes into Howl. He believes Sophie (being quite old due to the Witch of the wastes spell) could fool Madame Suliman into think that she is Pendragon's mother and that her son is such a coward he made her go in his place. Sophie (unsure who this Madame Suliman individual even is) begrudgingly agrees and so Howl sends her off, but not before telling her that he will follow close behind in disguise to make sure she's safe. He also gives her a ring that "will guarantee her safe return".

Howl sends her off and disguises as the king himself which temporarily fools Suliman. Unfortunately this plan is short lived as the real king walks in completely foiling the plan and forcing Howl to withstand a barrage of Suliman's magical attacks. One of which almost gets the better of him, however Sophie saves him just in time and together they escape in a flying machine.

While escaping in the flying machine, they are followed by some of Suliman's goons. That and Suliman's personal errand dog Heen and the now elderly Witch of the waste tag along too in Howl and Sophie's motor copter. Howl comments on this and how he didn't expect visitors to which Sophie quips back about how he didn't want to go. He explains that he finds Suliman very stern and frightening and that he needed Sophie to go ahead to test the waters as it were. He then, in a very grateful tone, thanks Sophie for saving him during Suliman's attacks. He then shows her how to engage a kind of gps tracker in the ring he gave her allowing her to go directly the castle while he creates a clone of the plane and leads the goons away.

In Sophie's dream, Howl returns to the castle late at night in his demon form much to the concern of Calcifer who believes he has gone too far and will soon be unable to change back. Sophie hears this, gets up from her bed and goes to Howl's room to investigate. Howl is unfazed and uncaring to Sophie's pleas for him to stop fighting and that she doesn't care if he is a demon. In fact, he flies off midway through Sophie's pleas, much to the latter's dismay.

The next day however, Howl seems far more jovial, laughing (good spiritedly) at Sophie for flying into the castles open mouth and saying to Calcifer: "I knew she'd make a good pilot." That day, he expands the house for their seemingly never ending family which now includes Turnip head, a scarecrow that Howl mentions has a nasty curse placed upon him.

Howl takes Sophie into his private flower garden, shows her where he did his wizard apprenticeship under his uncle and says that she start a flower shop with the readily abundant flowers which causes Sophie to become worried. She explains she doesn't want him to leave and says that she loves him even though she is not particularly beautiful. Howl staunchly refutes this statement and says that she in is fact beautiful and even if she is old he loves her deeply. This tender moment is broken however when a war zeppelin flies overhead causing Howl to curse them out as murderers and with a wave of his hand he detonates the bombs carried in the zeppelin causing it to be damaged but not to crash. Some demonic wizards transformed as large winged insects try and attack him and Sophie but he simply sprouts wings and drops Sophie back through the door into the castle and goes off to fight the attackers.

The next time Howl is seen onscreen is when he saves Sophie from an incoming bomb by riding on top of it and leading it away from her. It still blows up in the hat shop courtyard just meters away from Sophie and at first it seems Howl was injured or perhaps killed but miraculously he is unharmed. He and Sophie make it into the hat shop and away from the blob men patrolling the outside and Howl resuscitates Calcifer and just as quickly as he appeared he goes back out onto the front lines saying to Sophie that he doesn't want to run away anymore and that he wants to fight for their family.

Following the failed rescue attempt by Sophie and the near death of Calcifer (very nearly causing the death of Howl, as Calcifer was the vessel of Howl's heart) Sophie sees Howl's younger self when he first met Calcifer. Sophie is brought back to the present day and see that Howl has waited there patiently for her. He is still in his demon form but his human face is visible. Unfortunately he is completely unresponsive and his face is a ghostly pallor suggesting that he is clinging to what little life he has left. Fortunately, he has just enough strength to fly Sophie and Heen back to the castle. Although castle is perhaps over exaggerating as it now, with Calcifer in such a weakened state, has been reduced to a crumbling amalgamation of plywood and dutifully moving metal legs leading it very slowly to an unknown location.

Howl lands (or more accurately collapses) onto the moving structure, disperses his feathers and returns to his human self albeit still unconscious. In fact he looks so far gone Markl asks Sophie if he has died. Sophie says in a disheartened tone that he has not and after persuading the Witch of the Waste to give her Calcifer, she infuses Howl's heart back into him, freeing Calcifer and reviving Howl.

After Turnip head's true identity is revealed after Sophie breaks the spell on him, and Calcifer decides to rejoin their family, all is well. The war is over, Suliman is no longer a threat (and actually her dog Heen has decided to live with Howl and company from now on), Howl is his true human self once again, and Sophie and Howl's relationship has reached its pinnacle. The castle, repaired and restored, flies through the sunny sky, drifting amongst the clouds, while all of its occupants live their happy lives, content for the adventure to come. The end credits play and the film ends.

Castle in the Air (Novel)[]

It is a year later, and Sophie and Howl have married, and are expecting a child. While working on a divining spell for the King, Howl discovers that a djinn is going to steal the moving castle. He sends Michael and the new apprentice away, and wants to send Sophie away as well but she refuses to go. They argue about that, and while they are arguing the djinn arrives. Howl turns Sophie into a cat, and she is thrown out of the Castle. He tells Calcifer to save himself because the djinn is too strong for either of them. Howl is still in the Castle when the djinn comes, and Howl is turned into a genie by the djinn.

Howl is cursed so that he is unable to tell anyone that he is under a spell and no one is able to recognise him. Both Howl and Calcifer at some point find themselves in the hands of Abdullah, a carpet merchant, who has also lost his true love to the djinns. Howl is forced to grant a wish each day to Abdullah, although Howl uses his powers to cause as much trouble for Abdullah as possible. He later encounters the cat Sophie, who is named Midnight by Abdullah's companion the soldier, and finds that she has given birth to Morgan, who is a kitten. When Morgan is turned back into a baby, the Genie takes him to the castle in the air so he can keep an eye on him. Once the djinns are defeated, the Genie is turned back into Howl and he is reunited with Sophie, Morgan and Calcifer.

Appearance and Personality[]

Howl with blonde hair

In the movie adaptation, Howl has shoulder-length straight flaxen blonde hair, light blue eyes, and a pale complexion. He is tall and slender. Later on in the movie, Sophie Hatter cleans his bathroom and switches some hair potions, leaving Howl's formerly blonde hair a ginger color, which later turns a raven black colour. Howl is not very happy with this, and reacts by calling the shadows of darkness and covering himself with a see-through green slime in a particularly humorous scene. Though it is not entirely certain, Howl seems to cut his hair to a chin length bob hair cut after the meeting with Madame Sulliman although the length has changed so little it is difficult to say.

In the book of Howl's Moving Castle, Howl has "marble like" green eyes and it is unclear what his natural hair colour is. According to Calcifer, Howl is "very vain, for a plain looking man with mud-colored hair."

He uses charms and make up to make himself more attractive, as well as having a naturally engaging personality. Michael and Calcifer insist that the day Howl forgets to spend less than an hour in the bathroom is the day he is truly in love, a prediction which later turns out to be true. Howl wears flamboyant and fancy suits, claiming to Michael that "No one's going to employ a wizard if he looks like he can't make money at the trade" (although Sophie voices suspicions that really, he just likes clothes). The suit he wears most often is silver and blue though he later changes to his more favoured grey and scarlet one, later disguised as a black suit, when Howl goes into mourning for his tutor, Mrs Pentstemmon. Originally, it was just flashy, until Sophie accidentally darned magic into the seams by talking life into it, saying "[the suit is] built to pull in the girls."

Howl with black hair

Howl's hair is dyed occasionally, as he doesn't see why "people put so much value in things being natural". At the beginning of the book it is blonde, then a pinkish red color (this happened by accident, Sophie moved around his potions in the bathroom) and finally bluish-black, a color most people agree looks best on him, as it goes with his "glass green eyes". When Howl gets his heart back, his eyes become much less marble-like and more real looking.

Howl has a kind, generous personality. He allowed Michael and Sophie to live with him, and is very forgiving of their mistakes. He also gave Calcifer his heart when Calcifer was a dying falling star. His good traits, however, are masked by his more negative traits, as well as deliberate "blackening of his name", so very few people know of them. He hates to quarrel, and will "slither out" of situations he doesn't want to be in. He hates to be pinned down to anything, and is quite cowardly.

In addition to this, Howl has a somewhat child-like attitude, begging for attention and even throwing a tantrum. Despite his attention-seeking, self-absorbed nature, he's quite kind - or rather, is not wicked; "I'm too patient and too polite," as he put it.

The only way he can make himself do something brave is to tell himself he is running away. He also lies a lot, and likes to tease Sophie, though subtly. A good example of this is when he is pretending to be in love with Lettie to get information on Sophie, and he constantly goes on about her to make Sophie feel jealous. Howl's worst, or at least most troublesome trait, is his courting. He cannot rest until he has made a girl love him and becomes quite insensible, but once she loves him he swiftly forgets her.

This practice is where Howl got his reputation for eating hearts, as that is what rejected girls' angry aunts call it when they come looking for Howl. This practice also is why the Witch of the Waste cursed Howl, as she was jilted by him as well. Howl is very insensible with money, overcharging the rich and undercharging the poor, as well as spending too much too often. It is suspected that, when Howl gave Calcifer his heart, he lost some of his humanity. This is suggested by the progression of the Witch of the Waste, who had her fire demon for much longer than Howl. It is also suggested by Madam Pentstemmon, when she tells Sophie that Howl is "going to the bad."

Abilities[]

Howl's arm after using it for magic

Howl is a very talented wizard, and is also quite good at slithering out of things he does not wish to do - a talent he cultivated through his sister's unwitting aid - and can change into different animals (he's seen as a cat, a dog and an unidentified monster). In the movie, he is able to transform in to a large beast with black feathers and seemly various stages of transformation. He uses this power to fly to the battlefield and fight as well as to escape from enemies.

At one point in the movie, he 'zooms in', on a battleship when him and Sophie are in his garden, he passes walkways, slips past several henchmen, and goes to the heart of the airship where he unplugs several cables that stop all but one wing from working. But this magic seems to transform him into the beast:

Sophie: What did you do?

Howl: Just messed with it, it won't crash though.

Sophie sees that his finger nails have elongated into claws, and his forearm is starting to grow black feathers.
